Foes Snub Ulster's 100-1 Vote

AP, UPI

Final returns from Northern Ireland's referendum of union with Britain showed Friday that voters approved ties with Britain by a 100-to-1 margin, officials announced Friday. The vote was 591,820 for union with Britain to 6,463 against.

Both sides claimed victory. The Protestants, who outnumber Catholics by about 2 to 1 in Northern Ireland, had campaigned strongly for the pro-union vote. Catholic leaders had urged their followers to boycott the referendum, and they said the tiny number of anti-union votes indicated the boycott had been effective.

In London, police held three Irish girls and seven men under intensive questioning Friday night in connection with the terrorist bombings of cars in the heart of London. British intelligence men said one of the girls belonged to an Irish guerrilla group connected with Arab commandos.

Intelligence officers and Irish Republican Army sources identified two of the three girls as sisters: Dolores and Marianne Price, both of Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersontown district.

The girls, in their late teens or early 20s,

NDP 'Ready To Listen' As 2,000 Plan Protest

Land Act Fight Province-Wide

By BARBARA McLINTOCK

More than 2,000 people, some of them farmers on tractors, are expected to congregate on the lawns of the legislative buildings next Thursday afternoon to protest the government's controversial land commission legislation.

At the same time simultaneous demonstrations will be held outside provincial government buildings throughout B.C.

The demonstrations are being co-ordinated by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture whose spokesmen announced plans for them Friday.

Federation manager Dick Stocks of Vancouver emphasized that the demonstrations were all to be completely peaceful and non-violent and it had contacted Public Works Minister William Hartley to ask for extra security on the day of the demonstrations.

"We're responsible citizens," Stocks told newsmen in Victoria. "The last thing we want to do is let this thing get out of hand."

He estimated that between 2,000 and 4,000 people would show up for the demonstration in Victoria with thousands more at the smaller demonstrations throughout B.C.

He himself "didn't see the point" of bringing tractors to the legislative buildings for the demonstration, but said the federation wouldn't object to farmers who did, provided the tractors were properly licensed and insured for highway travel.

During the demonstration Thursday, agriculture federation leaders will present to Premier Barrett amendments they feel should be made to the land bill.

Chief among them will be a request that the government must buy land which it designates as farmland "at fair market price" if the owner wants to sell it when the government designates it.

As the legislation now stands, the government is under no obligation to give any compensation to those whose land values may be adversely affected by a government designation as farmland, parkland or greenbelt land.

Stocks noted that the previous Social Credit adminis-

Opposition Told To Offer Ideas

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Staff

Agriculture Minister David Stupich called in the Legislature Friday for MLAs from all parties suggest amendments to the controversial Land Commission Act to help save B.C.'s dwindling farmland and make farmers better off economically.

He made the appeal after Premier Barrett signalled the start of the debate on second reading of Bill 42 just over 35 minutes before the house adjourned for the weekend at 1 p.m. Friday.

Stupich said the government was prepared to listen to constructive suggestions from any quarter. But he added while his personal mail on the bil was running 692 to 952 against the bill, the government to date has received "precious little in the way of constructive suggestions" for its improvement.

To the opposition who frequently jeered the minister during his 35-minute speech, Stupich said: "I'm not asking your support for this bill. I'm not pleading with you. I'm inviting all members to bring forward their amendments. Surely they must believe in the objects of this bill; to save our farm land and make our farmers better off economically.

"We don't know a better way but we're listening."

There was no immediate indication when the debate would be continued next week, with opposition speakers replying to Stupich and presumably NDP backbenchers also getting into the debate. A major demonstration is being planned by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture for next Thursday.

Stupich, who later told reporters outside the house no definite amendments had been prepared yet, was critical in his speech of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture which asked time to consider the bill then told the government to "chuck it out" rather than offer constructive criticism.

(Federation manager Dick Stocks said following Stupich's speech Friday the federation will definitely offer some amendments when it meets the government next Thursday.)

But earlier, Stupich told the house one unidentified

Finance Cures Hopeful

PARIS (UPI) — Finance ministers from the west's wealthiest nations have made progress toward solving the new dollar crisis but decided Friday to hold another meeting next week, West German Minister Helmut Schmidt said.

"Chances for an international solution to the crisis are good," Schmidt told newsmen as Friday's conference session drew to a close.

It was decided, he said, to hold another meeting late next week, again in Paris.

Schmidt said the nine common market finance ministers will not take "any final decision" when they meet in Brussels Sunday, but will work on the Economic Community's own proposals to restore monetary order to exchange markets rocked by a new flood of speculation against the dollar.

Canadian Finance Minister John Turner told reporters after the meeting that all countries represented at the conference, including the United States, showed a great openness and were ready to reach a solution to the crisis.

Saanich Woman Slain, Police Question Girl, 17

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A 17-year-old Saanich girl was being questioned by Saanich police late Friday night in connection with the knife slaying of a 38-year-old woman.

● Picture on Page 9

The victim was identified as Mrs. Shirley Anderson, whose body was found by police in her home at the Lake Hill Corners housing development in the 4000-block Cedar Hill Crossroad shortly after 5:30 p.m.

A young woman was later seen by neighbors running barefoot along the pathway leading to the parking lot at Lake Hill Corners. She got into a small car and drove away at high speed. The pathway was spattered with blood.

After Saanich detectives and police photographers had completed their investigations at the slaying scene, the body of Mrs. Anderson, covered in a blanket, was taken to a waiting ambulance.

Stan Yaxley, who lives next door to the Andersons, said he had talked to Mrs. Anderson as she was returning home at 5:10 p.m. "She seemed very happy," Yaxley said.

He said that he saw and heard nothing until the arrival of police who asked him whether he had seen anybody leaving the house. "What ever happened between 5:10 and 5:30? I just don't know," he said.

Yaxley said Mrs. Anderson and a daughter who lived with her were "pleasant jolly people," who would pay their neighbors a visit for the odd half-hour and "have tea and coffee. They seemed very nice."

WASHINGTON (CP) — Governor William Egan of Alaska maintains that if an oil pipeline is built over Canadian territory, Canada would grab most of the pipe capacity to ship its own oil to the detriment of Alaskan exports.

"It is certain that Canada will require a substantial part of the capacity of any trans-Canadian line for Canadian oil," Egan told the U.S. Senate interior committee Friday.

The committee is considering legislation to remove legal roadblocks to the construction of an 800-mile trans-Alaskan line.

The pipeline, to tap the huge oil deposits of the northern Alaskan slopes, has been blocked by an appeals court decision that the U.S. government lacks sufficient authority to grant the necessary right of way. The government has launched an appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Environmental groups who oppose the line on the grounds that oil shipments from an Alaskan port might pollute the Canada-U.S. coastline have urged the alternative of a pipe through the northwestern Canadian interior.

Egan maintained that some Canadian officials have said

$20,000 Fine For Spill

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state ecology department has fined a Canadian pipeline company $20,000 for a Jan. 10 spill that sent an estimate 250,000 gallons of crude oil over farmland near the Canada-United States border.

The department claimed that employees of Trans-Mountain Pipeline firm failed to operate properly control valves while making a crude oil transfer at refineries in Ferndale and Cherry Point.

The department also charged that the absence of emergency spill procedures "significantly increased" the amount of oil spilled.

Canada Raps Team Reds

SAIGON (Reuter) — Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin sharply criticized today Poland and Hungary, the two communist members of the Vietnam peace supervision body, for refusing to agree to an investigation that North Vietnam had set up missile sites at Khe Sanh, South Vietnam.

Gauvin's comments were the most tangible evidence yet of a communist-western split in the ICCS over the administration of the Vietnam ceasefire. Indonesia has been reported backing Canada in seeking to investigate the allegations.

Grits Must Do More To Survive

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Unless the Liberals stop governing by the divine right they've assumed for 50 years, they're going to die a quick natural death from lack of support," says federal New Democratic House leader Stanley Knowles.

The Liberals have done "a lot of things we demanded," he notes, "but not nearly enough. They'll have to do a lot more."

The minority Liberals with their 109 seats as against the Conservatives' 107, depend from day to day on the 31 New Democrats for life and power.

"By giving us this and allowing us that," goes on Stanley Knowles, "they're only buying time because they really haven't changed in their divine right of power thinking, and they haven't gives us enough."

So when will "natural death," as he calls it, occur?

"No prediction beyond a week is safe," he replies.

Last November after an NDP caucus in Toronto, related Knowles, "we served the Liberals with our demands, our price in terms of legislation, to keep them in power."

That price?

"Higher old age pensions, increases in veterans' allowances, the $100 income tax credit, better housing legislation, improved legislative controls on foreign ownership," he says, ticking off some of them.

"But they haven't given enough," he adds. "We demanded a pension increase to $150 for the elderly and they scrimped in with $100.

"We demanded the pensionable age be reduced and they didn't cut it.

"They're not going to be allowed to get away with that kind of thing.

"They've got to stop governing as if they were born to power and become immediately more responsive to our demands — which are the popular demands of the taxpaying public at large, the voters.

"And I think they'll do it — because they'll do anything to hang onto power — and if they don't, well, it'll be the end of them."

Knowles spoke like this Friday afternoon as he went back into the Commons to watch another week wind down in which the New Democrats had kept the Liberals alive.

The third girl detained was not identified.

Security officials expressed fear that Thursday's assault, in which one man died and 243 persons were wounded, might be a prelude to a stepped-up revolutionary campaign that would affect other European capitals as well.

Prime Minister Edward Heath and Ireland's premier-elect Liam Cosgrave ended two days of confidential talks Friday and agreed a "continuing dialogue" was necessary on the problem of Northern Ireland, British officials said.

Sen. Patrick Magill, spokesman for the Catholic Nationalist Party, said the result of the Irish referendum was "a complete disaster" for the Protestants.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of the Democratic Unionist Party, the Protestant element advocating direct rule by London, said it was a "massive victory" for his side.

About 400 tellers behind a security shield of armored cars and heavily armed troops counted the votes. Helicopters and armored cars brought the ballot boxes from throughout Northern Ireland to Floral Hall, a converted dance hall on Belfast's northern outskirts. It was ringed by barbed wire entanglements, troops and armored vehicles while the counting went on.

But there was no repetition of the large-scale bombing campaign in Belfast and Londonderry during Thursday's voting.

London remained on the alert for other car bombs like that exploded outside the Old Bailey courthouse and the government offices a mile or so away in Whitehall. Army men blew open at least three suspect cars parked in downtown London. Scotland Yard investigated more than 200 bomb calls. Many were hoaxes.

NDP 'Ready' To Listen'

member of the federation had expressed support for the continued subdivision of farmland, including the 39 acres he owned. The minister said there was no doubt in the mind of this official: "He knows this bill will stop subdivision."

The minister added B.C. is losing farmland at an average rate of 10,000 acres a year. In the past 20 years there have been 65,000 acres of arable land lost on Vancouver Island alone. On top of this land lost to actual subdivision there is much more carved into parcels of three, five and 10 acres, "ideal for country living but too small for economic farming in most crops."

"I have an interest in some farmland (near Nanaimo) with a total acreage of 15 acres," he said. "It's the original family farm which I own along with my sister and which we hold in trust for six members of my family. I have absolutely no intention of subdividing or allowing that land to be subdivided."

Stupich suggested that other members might also wish to declare their present land interests in the course of debate on the principle of the bill. Amendments would be dealt in committee after the principle of the bill has been approved.

During his speech is the house, the minister attacked ads being run in provincial newspapers by B.C. Progressive Conservative leader Derril Warren. He said not one of the 10 points listed by Warren is factual.

In refuting the objections to the bill outlined by the Tory leader, Stupich said the land bill "gives no powers the government doesn't already have" but added it does give a commission "some power that the government has used unwisely in the past 20 years."

The reference to "some power" being given to the non-elected land commission set off a roar of protest from the opposition benches.

Opposition MLAs also thumped their desks approvingly when Stupich, answering a charge that the commission would dispense patronage, told the house he had received a number of letters from NDP members threatening to tear up their membership cards.

The minister added: "But there have been more letters from Social Crediters, Liberals and Tories who said we haven't voted for your government and probably never will . . . but don't back down."

The Conservatives, among other critics, have charged the bill will emasculate municipalities and regional districts, but Stupich argued the only references to these local bodies lay in a section dealing with "co-operation" with the provincial government.

The minister also rejected charges that banks and other lending institutions would refuse to extend needed credit to farmers whose land had been devalued through designation.

The government had been in correspondence with lending institutions, Stupich said, and has determined there has been no change in lending policy.

"They don't lend on the basis of what your land is worth," he said, "they lend on the basis of what income it is producing."

Other charges including the one that the bill "denies natural justice" because there isn't an appeal, are also untrue, Stupich said. The NDP is going to bring in legislation which will give any citizen the right to sue the crown.

Stupich said he wasn't blaming B.C. farmers for the situation in which the province now finds itself. He added the real blame lies with the previous Social Credit government which was in office for 20 years "and did nothing about it." But he did say the problem of dwindling farmland wasn't new nor was it unique to this province.

No one outside of B.C. seems to have found the cure, Stupich said. The widespread practice of extending preferential taxes as an incentive to the preservation of farmland has proved ineffective.

The minister appealed to the opposition to work with the government, to talk to farmers and to "help them save their land." He said: "We're listening and our concern is that we're hearing precious little."

It was the fault of society at large that such drastic steps now needed to be taken to preserve farmland, he said, so society, through the government, should pay for it, not make the farmers pay by having their land values decrease with no compensation.

Plans for the demonstration were worked out at a lengthy meeting of the agriculture federation board in Victoria Thursday. It will be supported by other groups opposing the legislation, such as the B.C. Land Owners Association, based in Vernon, and a Surrey group.

In Vancouver, meanwhile, Derril Warren vowed he would resign as leader of the B.C. Conservative party if Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich was able to beat him in a byelection fought on the issue of the land commission bill.

He said that if Stupich is convinced about support of the bill he should accept the challenge of a byelection.

"If he wins I will resign," said Warren, who does not hold a seat in the Legislature.

The Conservative leader said he has received 3,200 letters from people opposed to the bill and 6,000 other people have signed petitions against it.

Warren said it is no use merely amending the bill. Instead the government should decide now to withdraw it.

Stupich replied in Victoria that if he was to resign it would be because the people of his Nanaimo constituency wanted him to resign not because of Warren.

He suggested a better place to test the opinion of voters on the land commission legislation might be in South Okanagan because the member of that riding, opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, has come out very strongly against Bill 42.

Egan estimated that the trans-Alaskan line would take about three years to complete. A Canadian line, he said, would take much longer.

"Given growing energy demands all over our nation, this means that the most effective way to ease the situation in the west as well as affording some relief to the midwest is to build and operate the trans-Alaskan pipeline as soon as possible."

that Canada would want to control 51 per cent of a Canadian line which would mean "that the maximum flow of Alaskan oil to the United States could be held to 49 per cent of the pipeline's capacity."

"This lower capacity would mean a lower rate of north slope production, yielding Alaskan natives and the state of Alaska perhaps half the yearly amount of revenue now anticipated over twice as long a period."

Egan conceded that eventually two pipelines might be justified. If agreement is reached on the Alaskan line first, Alaska would be prepared to consider supporting a Canadian line as the second route.

John Whitaker, undersecretary of the interior, joined Egan and the pipeline underwriters in urging Congress to approve legislation which would remove construction roadblocks.

Torero Too Timely?

MADRID (UPI) — A fighting bull jumped off a truck transporting it to an arena Friday and was put to death in a crowded downtown Madrid plaza by a torero who happened to pass the scene equipped with his cape and sword.

Police were investigating how the bull managed to smash the door of the truck.

Police were also trying to find out how Segura happened to pass by that very moment carrying his sword and muleta. Segura is coming out of retirement this year to try a comeback.

Police 'Fear Worst' In Girl's Abduction

DALLAS (UPI) — Investigators said Friday that they fear the worst in the kidnapping of Leslie Janice Ward, the 14-year-old granddaughter of multimillionaire Henry English.

"I wish we'd get a ransom demand for a million dollars," Highland Park police chief W. H. Gardner said. "It would be a good sign."

"I don't think this guy knew the little girl at all," a sheriff's deputy said. "I don't think he knew whether she was worth 15 cents or $15 million."

A middle-aged man in an old grey car abducted her three blocks from school. At 8:43 a.m. Thursday, the car passed Leslie Janice's home. A maid saw her weeping in the front seat and said the man had his arm about her.

Uric Acid Forms Gout

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss "an imbalance of uric acid" in the system. I was told this is not gout. Is it possible to recover from this, or is it something one must learn to live with?

Please discuss diet. What of coffee and cola drinks? Do you have a booklet on this? —R.H.N.

"Imbalance" in this case can be translated into meaning that you have more than a normal amount of uric acid in the blood.

Some is normal, but about 90 per cent of patients with more than 9 milligrams per cent will eventually develop gouty arthritis — that is, painful attacks of gout in the big toe or other joints.

However, there are instances — but not common — when the elevation of uric acid is due to a congenital defect in certain enzyme systems having to do with uric acid metabolism. It may occur with other disorders such as diabetes, parathyroid disease, psoriasis or sarcoidosis. (Uric acid may also be elevated with stringent weight reduction.)

Likewise high levels occur when taking diuretics of the thiazide type for certain kidney ailments. Persons with a high cholesterol level may also have an elevated uric acid level — it is thought that they may be candidates for coronary heart disease.

So it is quite possible, for various reasons, that you may have high uric acid but don't have gout — or don't have it yet. (Too much uric acid also can contribute to one type of kidney stones.)

To sum up, now that you know the situation, this is the time to start controlling it. Today there are drugs that limit the formation of uric acid and other drugs that accelerate its release from the body. Which is better to use depends on which gives the better results in a particular patient.

Housing Cost Statement Promised for Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the Commons Friday he will "have something to say on Monday" about increasing housing costs in Canada.

He gave no details.

Paul Hellyer (PC — Toronto Trinity) had asked whether the minister had any specific programs to deal with the "alarming increase" in housing costs.

Basford referred to bills already before the house and added that he would be saying something Monday in connection with the points raised by Hellyer.

The Conservative member said that at the current rate of increase a house in Toronto will cost $250,000 by the turn of the century.

Basford said land costs in Toronto are a serious problem. This was why he was asking the provinces and municipalities to co-operate in a national land development strategy.

Hellyer later told reporters there is a crisis in housing costs and the government "should forget loss of face and bring in mandatory controls."

The answer to rising housing costs was a system of controls to lower interest rates and halt climbing labor costs, he said.

Tough Land Controls Promised in Ontario

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis said Thursday the province is moving toward tough controls on Ontario land that will prevent farmers from using their property for anytting but agriculture.

The controls would not cover all of Ontario "as we would like it," he said, but they would have "validity for many years to come."

He told 250 members of the Grey Count Federation of Agriculture in Maxwell, 40 miles south of here, that farmers are demanding "areas be designated for the preservation of the agriculture industry just to ensure the basic food supply."

Later he told a radio audience that if municipalities do not adopt their own land controls the province will step in and do it for them.

"We just can't have completely unfettered land development any more," the premier said.

Spill Threatens Animal Life

COLD BAY, Alaska (AP) — A United States government spokesman said Friday that thousands of waterfowl, salmon spawning streams and a few seal and sea otter are threatened by the spill of more than 200,000 gallons of fuel from a grounded and ruptured tanker.

Edgar Bailey, acting manager of the Izembek National Wildlife Refuge at Cold Bay, said 13,000 sea ducks and geese were in the area earlier this week.

"With the high winds we've been having, we hope that most of the fuel has evaporated," Bailey said. "But the most dangerous aspect of this is the diesel fuel. It's highly toxic, and we're worried the birds could take in some of it when they eat or drink. The results might not show up for several days."

Bailey said the waterfowl population was what should be its high for the year.

It was not known what cleanup facilities were in the area.

Don't Worry – Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has sent a telegram to Premier Dave Barrett assuring him that the oil spill in Alaska will not endanger the B.C. coastline or its marine life.

Trudeau said the Canadian Coast Guard has told him that the grounding of an oil tanker in the middle of the Aleutians some 1,000 miles from any populated area of B.C. means the spilled fuel oil will evaporate without any need for chemical or mechanical intervention.

Time to Slow Down

THE FACT THAT B.C. Agriculture Minister David Stupich has now agreed — under pressure by NDP backbenchers — to consider amendments to the Barrett government's provincial land commission act, indicates that at least someone at cabinet level is having second thoughts as to the advisability of pushing through the new law with undue haste.

The legislation as it now stands was largely drafted without consultation with or reference to other levels of government even though there is a strong possibility that both federal and municipal authorities may be affected.

This is not to say, however, that the basic intent of the act — to prevent the further erosion of farmland—is not laudable. The provincial government is to be congratulated for showing concern over this continuing problem. But when the concern is translated into action which may negate the rights of the individual Canadian citizen, it is time to reconsider.

Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has expressed the view that the legislation in question may violate the federal Bill of Rights and has called for a delay in its enactment until this question can be settled.

Though he did not specify the area of conflict, he undoubtedly was referring to subsection (a) of the first paragraph of the 1960 Canadian Bill of Rights which declares the "right of the individual to life, liberty, security of person and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law . . ."

It may be argued that the key to this is the interpretation of the phrase "due process of law" and that if the new draft land bill is passed "due process" has been followed and therefore the rights of the individual have not been abrogated.

However, interestingly enough, particularly in the light of the seeming disinterest shown by the present federal Minister of Justice Otto Lang, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau commented at length on just this particular matter when he was minister of justice in the 1960 Pearson government.

Here is, in essence, what he said at that time: The Canadian Bill of Rights declares the right of the individual to the enjoyment of property and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law. These words "are intended to guarantee the specific requirements of fair procedure."

He continues: "Section 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights provides that no law of Canada shall be deemed to deprive a person of the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice for the determination of his rights and obligations . . .

"This is a fundamental requirement which is already recognized in the public law of Canada. In a new constitutional bill of rights it might well be placed in association with the fundamental rights to life, liberty and property. This kind of guarantee is fundamental to the impartial administration of justice. The general requirements of a 'fair hearing' are well known."

Perhaps these words of the present prime minister coupled with the sage advice of Mr. Diefenbaker and the imprecations of the NDP backbenchers may be sufficient to persuade the Barrett government to slow down in its headlong rush to enact this ill-considered and dangerous law.

Local Transportation Tax

GREATER VICTORIA TAXPAYERS may have much to lose in talks going on between the greater Vancouver Regional District and the municipal affairs department of the provincial government. The talks concern the financing of Lower Mainland public transportation. In the long term, they must also concern the financing of Capital Regional District public transportation, since it is impossible to imagine one method of cost-sharing on the mainland and another, more favorable or less favorable to the local ratepayers, on southern Vancouver Island.

The latest proposal from the government to the Greater Vancouver district is that 50 per cent of the annual deficit of the public transportation system should be paid by the province and the other half by the local ratepayers through an increase in property taxes. It has been estimated that in present circumstances the rise in the tax rates would be about two mills, or $2 for every $1,000 of taxable assessed value of property.

This offer reportedly was greeted with laughter by the directors of the mainland district, and with unanimous opposition, which is not surprising.

At one time the Social Credit government appeared ready to give the regions a better deal than this New Democratic proposal. It was understood to be willing to turn over the B.C. Hydro systems to the regions with annual subsidies equal to the losses sustained by Hydro in its final year of operating the buses, plus one-half of any additional losses in the future. True, the Social Credit government retreated last spring to a less co-operative position, offering to pay only one-half of the operating deficits of any future municipal or regional rapid transit systems. But better was expected from the new government.

The New Democrats seeking election made two promises with a bearing on this matter. One was that "only services to property will be paid from taxes on property." The other was that an NDP government would develop an extensive public transit system "in conjunction with citizen and local community groups, with the provincial government assuming the major financial responsibility."

Mr. Lorimer has said that counter-proposals are needed. The Victoria region should not be slow in responding.

Thousands Languish in Prison Camps

By WALTER SCHWARZ from Rawalpindi

The cycle of callousness that keeps 80,000 Pakistani soldiers and 16,000 civilians in Indian camps and jails started on March 18, 1971. That was the day 19-year-old Ghazala Sartad last saw her husband, in East Pakistan.

Her plight sums up much of the story. She was brought to me here by a committee of Pakistani grass widows as part of a shrill publicity campaign. But she was in genuine tears before she had finished.

"We were in Chittagong," she said, "and we heard the Bengalis were coming to kill us. My husband is a major. He went to get help, leaving me with his best friend, a Bengali. When the mob came, they dragged me into the bushes and left me for half an hour. I was six months pregnant.

"They wanted to know where my husband was. My four children were put in a truck and then hurled to the ground. When I got back to the compound it was full of dead bodies."

Mrs. Sartad has not heard from her husband since that day, but a friend heard him last month during a broadcast by Pakistani prisoners of war on All-India Radio.

In the 14 months since the Indo-Pakistani war, the prisoners captured on the western front— 619 Indians and 542 Pakistanis — have been exchanged. President Bhutto of Pakistan achieved this in characteristic style by turning up at the camp in his helicopter and telling the Indians, "you are free. You can go home."

He later confided: "I have played my two of clubs. Now let's see what they do with their ace."

Since then 942 sick and wounded Pakistanis have come home from India. But the ace has not been played by the Indian government and the latest attempt to draw it was made by the students who stormed India House in London with toy pistols. Their efforts are carefully condemned here. "No terrorism is needed to spotlight this human problem," the Pakistani foreign ministry told me.

The year of stalemate has not affected Pakistanis only; 172,000 Bengali soldiers and civilians are stranded in Pakistan. The soldiers are kept in camps and forts on subsistence pay and not allowed out except under supervision. The Bengali civil servants camp in their houses, on $13 to $52 a month, their cars and furniture sold, their telephones cut.

"How can Bhutto complain about the Geneva Convention when he denies us the basic human right to go home?" said a former chief secretary. Less fortunate Bengalis, laid off from factories in Karachi, are fed in gruel kitchens and beg from door to door.

Meanwhile, the macabre deadlock remains tight. Bhutto will not recognize Bangladesh until Sheikh Mujib Rahman meets him (to talk about debts and liabilities) and India returns the prisoners. Mujib will not meet him until he recognizes Bangladesh. India will not give up the prisoners until Mujib agrees — in negotiations he will not attend until he is recognized. Bhutto will not release the Bengalis (his 10 of diamonds?) until he gets the prisoners back.

On this ex-British sub-continent, atrocities are bafflingly mixed up with old-world correctitude. "I gave Niazi (the Pakistan commander) my word of honor as a gentleman his chaps would be well looked after, and they damned well are," Field Marshal Manekshaw told me in Delhi the other day. He says that all the paraphernalia of European wars is there: gift parcels, daily broadcasts by prisoners to their families, regular mail, Red Cross visits; Radio Pakistan and the BBC news are put out on loudspeakers in the camps.

There have been ugly incidents at the prison camps in India. The Red Cross says at least two and perhaps three of six killed in one camp "seemed to be cases of cold-blooded murder rather than self-defence." When the Red Cross report was leaked, its senior representative in Delhi was sent out of India. Manekshaw said the report was "absolute rubbish."

The Red Cross says that after another escape attempt all officers in a camp were denied water for a day and forced to lie in the summer noonday sun for two hours. In another case, prisoners were spreadeagled in the sun on several days, and the commander told the Red Cross this was a "light punishment" for trying to escape.

The Red Cross has not been allowed into Camp 66 at Tehar jail in Delhi. According to Pakistan, returned prisoners say they had been interrogated there with electric shocks, had had finger nails pulled out and had been confined "with lunatics."

The Pakistani soldiers, and civilians who happened to be in Bangladesh, were first shipped to India for their own protection against the fury of the victorious Bengalis. Special incidents apart, General Tikka Khan, the Pakistani chief of staff, admits grudgingly that general conditions in the Indian camps range "from average to bad." The civilian prisoners include 1,600 babies, most of them born in captivity, and 6,000 children under 12. Manekshaw told me he sent in teachers and toys for them, but the sister of a major whose wife and five children are all in the camps said they had neither books nor teachers.

She wanted her name kept secret because she was trying to smuggle in vitamin pills for the children in her parcels of school books, towels and clothes. "The pills are forbidden because they are supposed to facilitate escape. The letters say the children's legs are weak from under-nourishment."

For the moment, New Delhi remains firm. "We fought a war over Bangladesh and can't regard the conflict as over until Bhutto recognizes Bangladesh," said a senior official. "We can't trust Bhutto with 80,000 of his best soldiers until his intentions are clear."

Meanwhile, Pakistan has drastically hardened its own line. Last November, Bhutto told me he was willing to exchange ambassadors with India, restore trade and hold a summit meeting even while the prisoners remained in India. Now the foreign minister, Aziz Ahmed, says: "We will not recognize Bangladesh, or take any step whatsoever with India, until the prisoners are back. We simply cannot trust anyone's word on this."

Pakistan's strongest argument is that the Geneva Convention, which Manekshaw had promised to observe when he appealed for a surrender, says categorically that prisoners must be returned "as soon as active hostilities have ceased."

Pakistani leaders are convinced India wants to use the prisoners as a lever for concessions over Kashmir as well as Bangladesh, and this has not yet been convincingly denied.

Cynics in Delhi and Rawalpindi say Bhutto is not as keen as he seems to get the prisoners back, because they would be difficult to absorb and would add to the critics of his role in the war. But Tikka Khan has promised to take them all back into the army, "Even if I have to demote some people or create new units."

Hopes now centre on the Bangladesh elections. There are strong rumors in Dacca, that, with the elections out of the way Mujib may give the names of the Pakistani soldiers he wants to put on trial — and give India permission to release the rest.

Pakistani spokesmen are pointing out that in Vietnam prisoners were exchanged days after the peace agreement. But priorities are different here. For all the Gandhian idealism in Delhi, the human factor in the conflict continues to get pushed into the background.

Ottawa Offbeat

No Voice from B.C. In Key Committee

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

With Parliament given a qualified post-budget guarantee of indefinite survival by the New Democrats, the fate of the government's key economic legislation will be in the hands of an unusually high-powered Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

No government majority in the Commons means a minority position in the committee.

So if the Opposition is in the mood to harass, it can embarrass and even humiliate the government with obstruction, delay and endless questioning of Finance Minister John Turner when he comes before the committee.

By asking the right questions of the right witnesses — possibly loaded question of planted witnesses — individual committee members can shape and shade the form of hearing at which the public is supposed to have its say about the budget.

The committee, comprising eight Liberals, eight Conservatives, two New Democrats and one Social Credit MP, has the usual quota of lawyers, a doctor, a farmer, an assistant crown attorney, two insurance agents, an industrial executive, six businessmen, a construction worker, a pharmacist and a banker.

The committee is a representative mix of veteran and freshmen parliamentarians, of some real squares and a couple of mavericks.

Most of them are men of strong and firmly-held opinion, so the committee can be guaranteed to be anything but dull.

There are some interesting names among them, including:

Sinclair Stevens, freshman Toronto Conservative, prominent some years ago in the formation of British International Finance which founded the Bank of Western Canada and then dissolved in a dispute with its president, the former Bank of Canada Governor James Coyne.

Max Saltsman, New Democrat from Waterloo, a nine-year MP, former businessman, now university management science lecturer, a small "c" conservative at heart, violently anti-NDP-Waffle.

Barnett Danson, five-year Liberal MP, worked on former Finance Minister Benson's misbegotten tax "reform," pushed the idea of "Cashex" — a discount for cash instead of credit — former assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Paul Hellyer, Toronto Conservative, former Liberal defence and transport minister, responsible for unifying the armed forces in their "Jolly Green Jumpers," jamming it down the Pearson government's throat under threat of resignation.

Dr. James Gillies, another freshman Conservative from Toronto, former chairman of the Ontario Economic Council, ex-chairman of the faculty of administrative studies at York University, past director of several Canadian companies and consultant to corporations.

Walter Baker and Paul Dick, both lawyers and new Conservative MPs from Eastern Ontario.

Harold Danforth, 15-year Conservative veteran, farmer; Ross Whicher, Liberal, long a fixture in the provincial legislature before coming to Ottawa five years ago; Judd Buchanan, Liberal, insurance man; all from Western Ontario.

Dr. Gordon Ritchie, Conservative, David Orlikow, NDP, druggist; and Marcel Lambert, Conservative, lawyer, all from the Prairies.

Gaston Clermont, Liberal, businessman, 13-year MP; Joseph-Roland Comtois, Liberal, businessman, seven-year parliamentarian; Jacques Trudel, second-term Liberal, businessman, board of trader; Harold Herbert, Liberal, freshman, construction man, all from Quebec.

From British Columbia? Nobody.

'An Ominous Change' . . . — . . . New Drug Abuse Pattern

World Body Seeks Source Control

By MAX WILDE from Geneva

Drug abuse all over the world has assumed "epidemic proportions" during the last 12 months, according to reports submitted to the International Narcotics Control Board by national and regional authorities.

The report for 1972 prepared by its secretariat for consideration by the board at its meeting here on March 12 describes as "an ominous change," the recent tendency for abusive consumption to spread from single drugs to multi-drug abuse; "The toxic effect of a given drug may be and often is greatly enhanced by consumption together with another drug," it says. The problem is thus less easy to control because, in the situation now emerging, if the supply of a particular substance is curtailed, consumption merely assumes another form.

Another "disquieting feature" mentioned in the report is the reappearance of cocaine in the illicit market, particularly noticeable in Europe. This is an almost intractable problem because of the extensive coca bush cultivation in the Andean region of South America, especially in Bolivia and Peru. Coca leaf chewing is a traditional indulgence which has been practised for centuries in these regions.

It is a direct result of poverty and undernourishment (it deadens the pangs of hunger) and its elimination can hardly be looked for in advance of major economic and social reforms on a wide scale, which would also have to take account of periodic natural disasters, such as earthquakes and drought.

The report continues: "The debilitating, often demoralizing, effects of exessive coca leaf chewing, coupled with the fact that the practice is not infrequently associated with alcoholism, make it essential on broad humanitarian grounds alone that organized cultivation of the coca bush should be terminated as soon as possible."

The use of cocaine in medicine is fast disappearing, according to the report, and while the remaining legitimate use of coca leaves is as a flavoring agent for beverages, the amount required is but a tiny fraction of the total coca leaf crop.

The report notes that in Peru some measure of reform has been achieved in recent years and more is in prospect.

In Bolivia, it says, there has been none, although about 10 years ago a formal agreement was drawn up between the government of Bolivia and the board, on the reduction of coca cultivation and consumption "but a change of government caused this to lapse." A further mission to both Peru and Bolivia to study the current situation is now being sent by the board.

There is the same problem of curtailing the supply of opium and its derivatives by cutting down the opium poppy cultivation. But, in this case, the report notes that considerable progress is being made, especially in Turkey and Thailand. Turkey has decided to abolish opium cultivation entirely from the end of the 1972 crop year, which the report describes as a "major event."

But, the report warns, even if abolition of opium cultivation in Turkey becomes a reality: "There remains a possibility that Turkey may become in some degree a highway for illicit traffic. Already a substantial quantity of cannabis moves across the country into Europe, and when indigenous supplies of opium are exhausted it is possible that they may be replaced by opium, or more probably by crude morphine, derived from sources farther east.

In Thailand, a five-year crop replacement project, to which the UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control has contributed more than $2 million and the Thai government more than $5 million, in cash, kind and services, is well under way. In the highlands of northern Thailand, semi-nomadic tribes have for generations grown the opium poppy. Any sudden change in the agricultural pursuits of these people could cause severe hardship, so the main objective is to eliminate poppy cultivation gradually in favor of other cash crops and economic activities.

Numerous trials are already under way in the fields of highland crop and vegetable production as well as fruit and nut cultivation. Crops being studied include hill rice, maize, potatoes, kidney beans, peach, persimmon, chestnut, avocado, apricot, tea, coffee, medicinal herbs and Chinese and French mushrooms (but not of the hallucinogenic variety). There are also plans for the development of livestock, poultry and fishery, apiculture and sericulture, and forestry and watershed management.

The Thai project is also meant to serve as a model for other countries, especially neighboring Burma and Laos. However, neither country is as yet ready for such a project because of military operations and guerrilla activities. The Narcotics Control Board estimates that as much as 400 tons of opium is at present smuggled from the "Golden Triangle" area where Burma, Laos and Thailand meet.

Another problem region where opium production is rife is the northern sector of Pakistan together with certain districts of Afghanistan and of eastern Iran which the board feels can only be dealt with "collectively on a broadly-based international program of external assistance."

In Pakistan there is also, according to the report, substantial traffic in cannabis and cannabis resin, some of which comes from areas beyond its northern frontier, and all of which has more than average potency. There is also growing international concern about the smuggling of cannabis from Nepal into northern India, and through India into other countries. Approaches to the Napalese authorities have received no reply.

Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia and popular son of his country's first president, died 25 years ago today — in 1948 — in mysterious circumstances, two weeks after the communist seizure of power and after a purge had begun. His half-dressed body was found under a window of an apartment, but it never emerged whether it was suicide or murder. The communists had won 38 per cent of the popular vote in Czechoslovakia in May 1946, and were in complete control of the country by mid-1948.

1949 — The Canadian cabinet approved the broad terms of the NATO pact.

1947 — Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced that the Canadian garrison was withdrawing from Germany since Canada was given no voice in Allied policy.

1933 — Earthquakes in California killed 120 and damaged property worth $50 million.

PARIS (Reuter) — President Georges Pompidou decided Friday night to make a dramatic last-minute appeal to voters in Sunday's general-election second stage, and his prime minister said a left-wing victory would lead France to ruin.

Pompidou will broadcast today after the end of the official election campaign. The outcome of the poll for a new National Assembly promises to be close.

The results in almost 200 of the 431 seats at stake are likely to be decided by a few hundred votes.

The main objective for both the Gaullists and the Communist-Socialist front was to get the support of the three million voters who backed candidates from the moderate Reformers in the first round last Sunday.

The centrist bloc has split, but most of the three million are expected to follow Jean Lecanuet in swinging behind the more reassuring government parties, or to abstain.

The other leader of the Reformers, Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, split the movement wide open Thursday night when he made anti-Gaullism his top priority, separating himself from Lecauet's insistence that anything would be better than a left-wing victory.

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Two huge chlorinators were flown in Friday to purify this resort area's drinking water, but health officials said it will be a day or two before tap water is safe for drinking, ice cubes and tooth brushing.

There was no panic in Miami Beach or in the neighboring communities of Surfside, Bal Harbour, Bay Harbor Island and Indian Creek Village, which together house 150,000 persons at this time of year.

Visitors and year-round residents complained over their uniced martinis and searched for stores that still had bottled water on their shelves. Most bottled water supplies were sold out.

The air force flew in the 1,750-pound chlorinators from Anniston, Ala., and they were immediately installed.

Church Heads Seek World Aid by Trade

OTTAWA (CP) — Leading churchmen took their campaign for world development to the cabinet and the Commons Friday, calling for major trade concessions for poor countries along with population-control policies.

They were starting a 10-day cross-country tour aimed at convincing Canadians to close the gap between rich and poor both in Canada and abroad.

Their brief to cabinet ministers, presented to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie and Welfare Minister Marc Lalond stressed trade over aid as the means to redistribute the world's resources.

The urged the government to press for a better deal for poor countries in international monetary and trade conferences, aiming especially at raising prices paid for commodities such as sugar, coffee and cocoa.

Archbishop E. W. Scott, primate of the Anglican Church of Canada and spokesman for the group, told reporters, later that Canadians should agree to a "voluntary limitation" on the resources we consume in the interests of helping the poor.

The brief also said the world's population is squeezing the limits of its resources.

Archbishop Scott said all churches, including Roman Catholics, are agreed on the need for family planning. But the group was urging the principle, not specific methods.

Others presenting the brief were Bishop W. E. Power, president of the Canadian Catholic Conference; Donald MacDonald, administrative secretary of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; John Zimmerman, president of the Lutheran Council in Canada; and George M. Morrison, secretary of the general council of the United Church.

Rev. N. B. McLeod, moderator of the United Church, is to join the churchmen today.

But Power said the answer is not simply raising the living standards of the poor to that of affluent Candians.

Indians, Government Still Talking

Wounded Knee Impasse

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Talks aimed at covering an "agreement in principle" between the government and militant Indians into an end to the armed confrontation at Wounded Knee bogged down Friday, and an Indian leader said "some disagreements remain."

Clergymen, federal officials and lawyers representing the American Indian Movement (A.I.M.) conferred for nearly two hours in nearby Pine Ridge but apparently were deadlocked on some of what the government had termed earlier "certain critical procedural matters . . . yet to be resolved."

One lawyer for the Indians said they are objecting to the government sealing off Wounded Knee from reporters.

Among the Indians' demands is that the interior deparment agree to suspend the Oglala Sioux tribal constitution and council, thus removing from office the tribal president, an A.I.M. opponent.

Other key points appeared to be exactly how and when the 250 Indians would end their occupation and whether they would be immediately arresed.

A justice department official, Jack Hushen, was asked at nearby Pine Ridge whether arrests still were anticipated. "That's part of the negotiations," he said.

Hushen said 20 persons were taken into custody late Thursday and early Friday, bringing to 53 the total number of arrests since the takeover Feb. 27.

"At least half a dozen Metis from this province have come and gone there during the siege but only three are still there today," said Dr. Howard Adams, past president of the Metis Society of Saskatchewan, in an interview.

One of their purposes in being there is to experience what is involved in such a confrontation with white authorities in case such an incident occurs in Canada, said Adams.

"We have no plans for any such insurrection in Saskatchewan. But the native people feel that their situation in this province is not too far removed from that of their brothers at Wounded Knee."

Labor Attacks Wardair School

VANCOUVER (CP) — The labor movement on both sides of the Canada-United States border is taking steps to disrupt a Wardair training school which the B.C. Federation of Labor terms a "strike-breaking school"

Stewardesses employed by the Edmonton-based charter airline have been on strike since Jan. 12.

The company has already been forced to move the training school, which it denies is training strikebreakers, from the Vancouver area to a nightclub in Point Rogers, Wash.

Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said Friday the striking stewardesses, members of the Canadian Airline Flight Attendants Association, have received permission from U.S. authorities to picket the new training school.

In addition, Haynes said, the AFL-CIO state labor council in Washington is attempting to persuade the U.S. Immigration Service to refuse admission to anyone intending to attend the training school.

Tom Spalding, executive vice-president of Wardair, admitted Friday that the company is operating a training school at the Point Roberts nightclub, but denied it was a school for strikebreakers. He declined further comment.

Talks between the two parties continued Friday under federal conciliator Don Cameron, but there was no report of progress.

Miami Beach Told:

Don't Water the Highballs

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Two huge chlorinators were flown in Friday to purify this resort area's drinking water, but health officials said it will be a day or two before tap water is safe for drinking, ice cubes and tooth brushing.

There was no panic in Miami Beach or in the neighboring communities of Surfside, Bal Harbour, Bay Harbor Island and Indian Creek Village, which together house 150,000 persons at this time of year.

Visitors and year-round residents complained over their uniced martinis and searched for stores that still had bottled water on their shelves. Most bottled water supplies were sold out.

The air force flew in the 1,750-pound chlorinators from Anniston, Ala., and they were immediately installed.

Assistant Dade County health director Richard Morgan said it would take "at least a day or two" to flush the system, making the water safe to drink.

Health director Milton Saslaw said Thursday that Miami Beach water contained too many bacteria to be fit for human consumption. He recommended that residents boil their water before drinking it.

Miami Beach officials said the county health authorities' charge was irresponsible. They said there is nothing wrong with the water.

"I think the economic harm done to this city was immense," said Mayor Chuck Hall. "It will take a long time to undo what never happened."

No Place for Tourists

SAIPAN (Reuter) — The normally rainy islands of Micronesia in the western Pacific are as dry as a bone.

The situation is so serious that tourists are being asked to cancel their visits, and government officials are considering transporting water by barge to some of the hardest hit areas.

Ponape, the wettest island in the United States — administered Trust Territory of the Pacific, normally has an annual average rainfall of 180 inches, or about 15 inches a month.

But in January less than two inches fell and February was not much better.

Water rationing is in effect, with many residents hauling water in barrels from far-off rivers and streams to the main town, Kolonia.

In Palau, the district administratór has declared a crisis situation, and is asking all tourists, businessmen and government officials to cancel visits.

The trust territory's transportation director was on Guam last week looking into possible assistance from the U.S. military to transport water by barge.

Broad Beans

I am never in any particular hurry to rush my vegetable seeds into the ground, for I have no ambition to have the earliest peas or the biggest cabbage in our neighborhood—just the best-tasting. And I have noticed that vegetables which are grown fast and without any setback from cold soil or chilling spring winds are always more succulent and flavorsome. Therefore, with most kinds, I wait until the ground is pleasantly warm to the touch.

There is one seed, though, which I bung into the ground as soon as the soil is dry enough to be worked: the broad bean.

One reason why it pays to give broad beans an early start is because this enables the plants to make their full growth before the hordes of blackfly arrive on the scene. This pest, whether you call it the bean aphid, black aphid, blackfly or dolphin, has a natural affinity with the succulent growing tip of the broad bean plant, where it gathers in its thousands.

These could be killed off by spraying, of course, but not before they have fouled the beans. Besides, I am not overly keen on spreading poison spray on food crops soon to be eaten.

An easy and effective way to control the ravages of the blackfly is simply to snip off the tips of the plants as soon as a good crop of the pods has been set and before the blackfly puts in an appearance. When he can't find any broad bean tips, the black aphid will move on to his next favorite foods—the young branch tips of wild cherry trees and the backs of the leaves of nasturtium plants.

The broad bean is a native of the Mediterranean and was well known to the early Egyptians, but in spite of this sub-tropical origin, the plant is remarkably hardy—much more so than any other member of the bean family. There is no need to worry over late spring frosts, and about the only danger in early sowing lies in a tendency for the big, meaty seeds to rot in cold, wet soil.

There are several ways to lessen this danger. One good stunt is to moisten the seeds and dust them with Spergon or similar seed dressing before sowing to protect them against the invasion of rot organisms in the soil.

Another way is to dry off the soil artificially before sowing by digging in some bone dry peat moss, which soaks up excess moisture like blotting paper.

A third method is to "chit" or presprout the seeds in a damp bath towel stored in a warmish place. As soon as the seeds start to sprout, they must go into the ground immediately. Any of these techniques, or any combination of them, will do the trick.

In selecting a variety, you have a choice of three groups: the Longpods, the Shortpods and the Windsors.

The Longpods and the Windsors are again divided into white-seeded and green-seeded types, and the Shortpods into dwarfs and talls. Shortpods are the earliest, Longpods the hardiest, and the Windsors have the best flavor, with the green-seeded kinds more tender and delicious than the whites.

Broad beans are not very popular in some families, and this is usually because the gardener insists on leaving the pods unpicked too long, whereupon the seeds become hard and unpalatable.

Pick your pods before they become too bulgy, while the green seeds are still tender and succulent. Don't overcook them, don't salt the water, and you'll find broad beans, with their distinctive nutty flavor, an altogether new taste sensation.

It's Also the Devil, Says MELVIN MADDOCKS

Boredom Is a Curse

A psychologist, noting the well-known, glassy-eyed boredom produced by habitual television-watching, went on to make the rather astonishing observation that being bored isn't necessarily bad. Much of life, he argued, is, in fact, boring, and children especially should be trained to expect this.

Readers tempted to sputter "Big bore yourself!" ought to make sure the yawning psychologist is their true target. Isn't he voicing what a lot of other people are thinking?

They may not discuss boredom so blatantly. But they pay their terrified respects by the ways they squirm to escape all their lives from the psychic country of the lotus-eaters.

One is no sooner born, presumably, than the bogey starts closing in. Parents must fill the crib with the most stimulating playthings — as if a human being would lapse into terminal boredom at nine months without all this psychedelic catnip.

At five, the child enters the school system, where teachers convinced that education ought to be ecstasy — but fearful that it is dull, dull, dull — frantically stir actual and metaphorical strawberry syrup into the actual and metaphorical milk.

Sixteen or 17 — or, gulp, 20 — years later the perennial student lands a job described as "challenging" and "exciting." It doesn't quite "fulfill" him. That is to say, it bores him silly. By now he is highly educated in his standards of boredom if nothing else.

So he gets married.

Then, on an infrequent trip to the barbershop, he picks up a magazine with the latest, inevitable article on marriage. Are Husbands and Wives Obsolete? — things of that sort.

He is told that the boredom of the nursery, the classroom, and the office are as nothing compared to the ennui of monogamy. Depending on whether the author is a radical or a liberal, the young married is given from two to seven years before total indifference sets in.

Well, so what? he asks bravely. Isn't there a whole anti-boredom industry working night an day to produce — what do you call it?—"entertainment"?

Alas, even the antidotes to boredom can be boring. The master anxiety of popular films, plays, and novels seems to be that their audience will walk out or nod off in about five minutes or five pages if — quick! — there isn't another whomp of the old violence or a nude scene.

At this point, the first law of boredom may be defined: The harder one works at avoiding boredom, the more likely one is to be bored.

If, on the other hand, the arts are more fine than popular, they are all too likely in their war against boredom to choose boredom as their subject, like the plays of Samuel Beckett, the films of Michelangelo Antonioni, and the anti-novels of Nathalie Sarraute.

Our young anti-boredom fighter runs for his life. But where? After a brief, panting fling at activism — which ends, of course, in "political apathy" — he sinks down defeated before that television set where we first met him.

Or so the psychologist's script dictates, supported by a silent, fearful myth in the hearts of many that most people, as Toreau put it, must lead lives of quiet desperation.

What an insult this whole scenario is to the resource of human curiosity! How utterly unacceptable its conclusions are!

Surely the supreme mistake is to accept boredom at all. As something to live with, like that psychologist. As something to panic from, in the fashion of the swinger. Or worst of all, as something to be proud of — a badge of elitism — in the spirit of the intellectual snob.

Boredom is a curse—a disastrous loss of appetite at the feast, a dulling of the heart, a glazing of the eyes, a shutting down of the psyche on the posibilities of life.

Earlier Christians had a word for it: accidie. Meaning, listlessness as an absolute — the opposite very of the state of grace.

A lot of analysts-of-the-modern have tried, in effect, to find the name — the characteristic guise — for Mephistopheles in their time. It might be hard to discover a likelier culprit than that drooping, really intolerable coincidence of lack of energy and lack of purpose: boredom.

Scandal Aids Stars

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — The MGM hierarchy converged on Gila Bond, Ariz., to hush up the more gory details of the suicide of David Andrew Whiting, the manager of Sarah Miles. It's always interesting to watch a big studio in operation when a scandal is brewing on a movie location. The legal and publicity departments do masterful jobs.

The lawyers got a restraining order which blocked the appearance of Miss Miles, costar Burt Reynolds and Miss Jane Evans, governess for Miss Miles' son, from appearing at the inquest into Whiting's death, which police said was apparently from an overdose of drugs. (This order was subsequently overturned.)

Miss Miles and the virile Reynolds are co-starring in The Man Who Loves Cat Dancing down in the desolate desert location. In her statement to police, Miss Miles said that Whiting slapped her around after she had come from Reynolds' room at three a.m., demanding to know where she had been. Continuing her story to police, Miss Miles asked Miss Evans to call Reynolds. When Reynolds arrived, Whiting had gone so Sarah went back to Reynolds' room to spend the night. Next morning Sarah returned to her nearby motel room and found Whiting's body in the bathroom. There were blood stains found in Whiting's room, the maid's room and Miss Miles's rooms, which police said were apparently from a fall suffered by Whiting.

For Reynolds, the story can only do him worlds of good because it fits in with his sexy, virile image. He'll be a superstar. And for the wacky Miss Miles, it only makes her more colorful. She'll sell tickets from now on. You can't beat page one publicity. The only people who will ask more questions are Dinah Shore — girl friend of Reynolds — and writer-director Robert Bolt, husband of Miss Miles.

Harry Guardino aand Jennifer Revson have set the date — early summer — for their marriage. The beautiful Jennifer is the sister of Peter Revson and can buy all her cosmetics at a discount. Can a school system really be said to be operating as an "educational" force when New York City's will have 1,400 security guards this year at a a cost of $11 million, simply to protect persons and property from attack?

Malcolm Anderson, a 38-year-old investment adviser, said Friday he will be a candidate in the March 31 byelection for the aldermanic seat left vacant by the death of Ald. Ove Witt.

Anderson lives at 3965 Telegraph Bay, Saanich. He ran unsuccessfully for alderman in Victoria last December.

He said as a businessman he is concerned about rising municipal taxes, but apart from that, he's quite satisfied with the way the city has been run during the past two years.

Anderson is the second candidate to declare himself in the running. Mrs. Margaret Richards of 1070 Moss was the first earlier this week.

Few Are Half as Funny As This Gem at Bastion

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Picture three couples, in two two living rooms on the same stage, in separate gatherings on two different days, with one couple engaged in quite separate dialogues with each of the other two.

Confused?

Well you might be, except that this is one of the things that happens in How the Other Half Loves, Bastion Theatre's final main-sage production of the season — and an hilarious success on opening night Friday.

Alan Ayckbourn had a wild idea when he wrote this comedy, an idea that calls, even more than in a more standard comedy, for split-second timing.

For the audience, the opening moments were perhaps puzzling, for it took a second look to figure out that this was not just one set.

Things became either more of a puzzle or a shade clearer when people appeared, two obviously affluent and two carelessly not, and carried on business and conversations with each other while completely ignoring the other couple.

Still with me?

It's no use trying to explain the play any further. You'll just have to try to get tickets and see for yourself.

The play enjoyed a long run, not surprisingly, in London, starring Robert Morley. If we're going to pick out any of the cast for special mention here it must be Owen Foran, for he does a fabulous job of bringing "Morley" to the stage of the McPherson Playhouse.

Apart from that, every member of the cast deserves highest credit for keeping the laughs rolling in situations that flashed in an instant from situation to situation, house to house, day to day.

Thanks to the direction of Edwin Stephenson, the timing was precise throughout, with nothing either overlooked or overlapped.

The rest of the laugh-raisers in the cast are Nonnie Griffin as Foran's wife, Milo Ringham and Jim McQueen as the poorer couple, and Margaret Martin and Robert Graham as the "ones in the middle."

Glenn MacDonald designed the set, and Jens Van Draby the costumes for this play which should keep Victorians chuckling until Bastion's mainstage returns next fall.

And speaking of that, Stephenson gave more than a hint of what this area may expect in the way of entertainment from Bastion next year.

Just to name the definite ones, there'll be The Patrick Pearse Motel, a comedy-farce to open Oct. 26; a holiday musical at Christmas; Child's Play, a suspense-mystery-drama, in February; Born Yesterday, another comedy, for March; and Noel Coward's ever-popular Private Lives in May.

Plans are also afoot to bring to Victoria as a guest production in April a drama from Theatre New Brunswick. Bastion may also send one of its plays to the eastern centre.

Soiled Clothes To Be Replaced

By JEAN SORENSEN
Colonist Correspondent

ALERT BAY — Ministry of Transport manager Bruce Waine said this week the oil-stained clothing of school children who helped with cleaning operations on the beach here will be replaced.

Complaints of oil-damaged clothing from parents arose after students volunteered to help the first day of the oil-spill and did not bother to go home and change school clothing.

Students were told to bring clothing to a representative employed by Clean Seas of Canada Ltd. for cleaning.

Waine said clothing that was deemed too spoiled by oil to clean would be replaced.

Mrs. Bob Williams said her children's clothing had been returned last week in the same plastic bags they had been sent away in. She said the clothing had been returned untouched.

She estimates clothing of her four boys who helped in the clean-up operation at $60. She said her children had been told the clothes were not worth cleaning.

Waine said the Clean Seas of Canada people had left the area and that MoT would now be handling complaints.

"But, there will be no cash payments," he said.

Waine said he will personally be reviewing the clothes and considering if a voucher would be given to the family of the child.

"I'm a parent and I know people can't afford to take a loss on their children's clothing, but on the other hand, we don't want to be had either," he said.

Candidate Enters Byelection

Malcolm Anderson, a 38-year-old investment adviser, said Friday he will be a candidate in the March 31 byelection for the aldermanic seat left vacant by the death of Ald. Ove Witt.

Anderson is a member of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission and the Greater Victoria Public Library board.

He said as a businessman he is concerned about rising municipal taxes, but apart from that, he's quite satisfied with the way the city has been run during the past two years.

Anderson is the second candidate to declare himself in the running. Mrs. Margaret Richards of 1070 Moss was the first earlier this week.

U.S. Sweepers Found Just One Mine: Hanoi

Colonist Wire Services

HANOI — The North Vietnamese press Friday charged that the United States had succeeded in neutralizing "only one mine" in a two-day minesweeping operation earlier this week off Haiphong.

The party newspaper Nhan Dan said that between the resumption of minesweeping early Tuesday afternoon and its conclusion Wednesday evening, the American task force succeeded in blowing up just one mine.

The army newspaper Nhan Dan Quan Doi ironically described this acheivement as "something really unique," adding: "And yet the United States prides itself on the efficiency of its ultramodern minesweeping methods."

The newspaper said that four or five U.S. radar stations had been set up along the northern coast to work closely with a fleet of minesweeper-Helicopters. The results were "derisory" and bordered on irony, the newspaper said.

"It is an unprecedented record," it said.

Referring to U.S. state department reports that the minesweeping operations were proceeding successfully, the newspaper said that in reality "the Pentagon is issuing canards."

"If it has not yet gotten to grips with the problem," the newspaper said, "it is because the U.S. wants things to drag on. It makes a show carrying out the clauses of the agreements in order the better to violate them and to prolong the blockade."

Capital Loans Scope Widened

Municipalities and regional districts will be able to borrow for a wider range of projects and improvements under amendments to the Municipal Finance Authority Act introduced Friday by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer.

All capital improvements now may be financed through the authority, a central agency which insures collective borrowings by its member municipalities. Previously, only water, sewer and pollution control projects were covered.

Definition of authority members is also broadened to include the city of Vancouver, which operates under its own provincial charter, the water districts of Campbell River, Nanaimo, Victoria and Vancouver, and the Sewerage and Drainage district of Vancouver.

Curtis

Hugh Curtis (PC—Saanich and the Islands), who served as chairman of the authority in its first two years of operation after it began in 1970 and now is deputy chairman, said the amendments were a "positive and evolutionary" step in the development of the authority.

Lorimer said outside the house that municipalities and regional districts are still free to finance their capital requirements on their own, although the authority "may be able to offer them a cheaper rate than they can get on their own."

Authority chairman Ron Andrews, who is mayor of North Vancouver District, said Friday:

"It (the expansion) is something that we have sought for some time. Granting us wider powers should result in savings to regional districts and municipalities through lower interest rates."

The authority has raised $44.9 million through five issues in its three-year existence.

"A year ago we contacted the regional districts about expanding our authority's financing into other areas and we received almost unanimous approval," Andrews said.

"The new powers are welcome and they will enable the authority to establish itself more firmly than ever in the borrowing market and it will also make funds available to local governments and lower cost," he added.

A request to the previous government to grant wider powers was refused. A new request to the new government was made late last year, an authority spokesman said.

The new powers, the chairman said, would also allow the authority to reconsider an earlier proposal to sell an over-the-counter issue at regional board offices, municipal halls and other outlets in B.C.

The proposal was tabled last year because it was felt that such an issue would be harmful to regional boards, municipalities and the authority because they would be competing in basically the same market. Regional districts and municipalities need not now go into the market on their own as that cost will be eliminated.

High Speed Adventure Cost $1,100

A 25-year-old Saanich man will have to pay $1,100 for a wild car chase Friday morning in Colwood, Saanich and Victoria but—thanks to his wife and two small children—he won't be going to jail.

The driver, John Bertram Gabriel of 3061 Orillia, pleaded guilty Friday afternoon in Victoria Provincial Court to a three-count charge of criminally negligent driving, failing to remain at an accident scene and public mischief.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the chase began at 5:15 a.m. when Gabriel's car passed an RCMP vehicle in Colwood. It reached speeds of 85 to 90 miles an hour, involved a dozen police cars from three forces and covered 10 streets before it ended on Dunedin.

Gabriel abandoned the car there and escaped on foot after a short chase. During the road adventure, he hit a parked car on one street and forced a male pedestrian to "dive off the road" on another.

At 7:45 a.m., Gabriel phoned Victoria police to report his car had been stolen. Two policemen spent six hours in investigation until Gabriel admitted he had been driving and "took off because he had bee ndrinking."

Gabriel admitted a 1970 conviction for dangerous driving in the same area. On questioning by Judge William Ostler, he said he had a wife and two children, worked as a watchman on James Island and drove to work daily from his Saanich home.

The judge indicated he supported Macintyre's suggestion of a jail term but added "the people who will suffer" were Gabriel's family. He fined Gabriel $500 on the first count, $350 on the second and $250 on the third, said there would be a licence suspension and set payment of the fine at $75 a month.

No Deaths

Victoria and Saanich have won certificates of merit for no traffic fatalities during Safe Driving Week. These awards are made by the Canada Safety Council annually. This is the fifth successive award to Victoria and the fourth to Saanich.

Saanich Solves Straw Vote Puzzle

Electors Will Decide Trustee

Saanich school board has finally cleared up the mystery of the straw vote.

Electors of the school district will make their choice of a new trustee known March 31, a time when they will also vote on a regional hospital board capital improvement referendum.

The board has had trouble trying to fill a vacant trustee seat. No one qualified in last December's election and five persons came forward recently in answer to a board advertisement. Because of the situation the board asked the provincial education department for advice and was told to take a "straw vote."

Trustees, surprised by the term, sought clarification from the department. The wording in an initial reply failed to remove the puzzle.

Board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott said Friday the March 31 scheme really adds up to a "straw vote which can be interpreted as a plebiscite."

Mrs. Parrott
. . . name to minister

The 4,500 eligible voters will be asked to mark the name of the trustee candidate they favor when they are voting on the hospital referendum.

"What we will be doing is polling the people to see who they want to represent them," Mrs. Parrott said. "The name of the person they choose will be presented to Education Minister Eileen Dailly."

Because of the situation surrounding the vacancy the minister must give final approval of the replacement.

While Mrs. Dailly isn't bound by the vote, Mrs. Parrott has no doubt at all that she will abide by it.

The voters will have four definite choices, possibly a fifth. Those whose names will appear on the ballot are D. A. Grafton, 4923 Townsend; F. R. Machin, 985 Abbey; Margaret Protapappas, 4965 Lochside, and R. E. Tinney, 5060 Cordova Bay. A fifth person who looms as a possible candidate at the moment is S. G. Watson, 1670 Pear.

Command Change Marked Tuesday

At a special ceremony at CFB Esquimalt at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Capt. Godfrey Hayes will assume command of the base from Commodore R. V. Henning who is retiring from the service.

The 53-year-old Hayes, currently chief of staff logistics, has served in several capacities earlier at Esquimalt.

In September 1962 he commanded the Second Canadian Escort Squadron at Esquimalt until he joined the Canadian Join Staff in London, Eng. in 1964.

After his Second World War service with the Royal Navy and Royal Canadian Navy, he was appointed to the reserve training staff at HMCS Malahat, Victoria's naval reserve division.

Later he was appointed to Vancouver's reserve division, and then was named training commander of the Canadian light cruiser HMCS Ontario, based at Esquimalt.

Announcement of Hayes' appointment was made Friday by the defence department which also reported that the Esquimalt-based destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, which left here Jan. 29 for the South Pacific as part of Canada's truce contingent in Vietnam, will spend the weekend at Singapore.

The ship, commanded by Cmdr. L. A. Dzioba, will remain in port until Tuesday when it will take part in naval exercises with other Commonwealth forces.

The ship has been scheduled to remain in the South Pacific as standby support to Canadian forces serving on the international supervision commission.

A forces spokesman said Friday that no decision has been reached as to whether another ship will replace Terra Nova in its current role. Ottawa said earlier the ship would only remain in the South Pacific for a 60-day period.

Esquimalt Polls Open at 8 a.m.

Voting in the Esquimalt by-election today to fill the aldermanic vacancy left by the death of Ald. Art Cuthbert will take place in the municipal hall from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

City Urged Not To Start Own Ambulance Services

Klein

Service would be inferior and the cost prohibitive if Victoria were to provide ambulance services under the auspices of its fire department, according to L. B. Klein, research co-ordinator of the Victoria-based Canadian Ambulance Ad-Hoc Committee.

In a brief submitted Friday to Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of city council's health committee, Klein recommends that if the city is waiting until the provincial government brings in legislation that might place ambulance services under regional control, council should retain its present contract arrangement with a private ambulance firm.

The brief says if the city added ambulance service units to its fire department and cancelled its present contract with Garden City Ambulance, the taxpayers would be faced "with an outlandish expense."

This view is shared by Frampton who said earlier this week that the city's ambulance bill could jump to $120,000 a year if it were to provide an up-to-date, efficient ambulance service. That would be double the amount the city now pays to Garden City Ambulance.

The ambulance service question has been under review ever since Klein and his ad-hoc committee said last year that ambulance services were inadequate in most of the Greater Victoria municipalities.

In his brief, Klein says there are numerous examples which show that fire departments can't provide efficient ambulance services.

In most cases, he says, firemen lack proper training, while trained ambulance personnel can provide better and cheaper service.

"There are people in the province of B.C. who have received training far beyond the level of an A class industrial first-aid ticket. Some of these people are graduates of the 480-hour ambulance training course conducted by Metropolitan Ambulance Services of Vancouver," he says.

"Others are men who have spent several years in ambulance work and have taken in-hospital and advanced medical training in emergency medicine. These people are specialists in their field and could be employed at a considerably lower wage than a firefighter," Klein says.

For further information, Klein also gave Frampton a copy of a brief prepared by the Ambulance Employees Union for submission to Burnaby council.

That brief deals in detail with the question of providing a municipally-operated ambulance service for "emergency calls only."

That scheme, the brief says, has been tried by several Canadian cities and in each case, it failed.

There was a duplication of services which resulted in prohibitive costs. The only good thing the brief has to say about the municipal ambulance service is that it might respond a little faster to emergency calls than a private one.

Victoria council will have to decide what to do about ambulance service before June 30, when the city's present contract with Garden City Ambulance expires.

It has been estimated that the city would have to add as many as 12 men to its present firefighting force if the department takes over ambulance duties.

Industries Face New Fire Prevention Laws

Tighter fire prevention regulations for industrial operations will be in effect in B.C. for the 1973 fire season, the B.C. Forest service announced Friday.

The new regulations will apply to all industrial operations near any forest, not just to actual logging operations.

All industrial operators will be required to have weather instruments necessary to determine the forest fire weather index each day during the fire season in keeping with forest service standards.

The new regulations also specify in detail the amount and types of fire-fighting equipment to be kept at all industrial operations. Industrial operations are defined as "any logging, lumbering, sawmilling, land clearing, engineering construction or industrial activity utilizing manpower or equipment."

In another new regulation, watchmen will be required to remain at work sites for at least two hours after operations have stopped for the day when the fire hazard is especially high.

In another announcement Friday, Ian Cameron, chief forester with the forest service, said men hired to fight forest fires now will receive at least $4 an hour without board, an increase from the previous $1.75 an hour with board.

The $4 hourly rate is for actual firefighters. Increased pay was also announced for other jobs in the firefighting force ranging from pump operators to cooks, mechanics and superintendents.

Cameron said the new rates are effective immediately although the fire season doesn't officially start until May 1.

He said the new rates "reflect a new philosophy . . . whereby we can expect a good day's work."

Cameron said there were 1,903 forest fires reported in B.C. last year costing an estimated $2,288,000. A large percentage of that bill covered costs of water bombers, bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Firefighters wages were about 25 per cent of the total bill.

Germany Improved for Air Canada

CP Air Wins China Flights

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian air travellers will be able to fly directly to the Peoples Republic of China and two new cities in West Germany on Canadian airlines, Transport Minister Jean Marchand announced Friday.

The transport minister said the government has reached air agreements with China and Germany. CP Air will be the Canadian carrier on the China route while Air Canada will continue to serve Germany.

Marchand told reporters a decision on the Canadian airline for a new route to Milan, Ialy, is likely in about one month.

CP Air will be permitted to fly to Shanghai and Peking while the Chinese airline will be allowed to land in Vancouver and Ottawa. China is just now beginning to acquire long-range jets and is not expected to operate on the new route for some time.

Marchand said he expects CP Air will begin service on the new prestige route to China soon. CP Air jets would probably refuel in Alaska and stop at Japan on the way to China.

John Gilmer, president of CP air, said in Vancouver the decision "to award Shanghai and Peking to CP Air is a logical one within the framework of the air policy which has designated our airlines as the Canadian flag carrier to service Asia."

Gilmer said because of ground handling and other technical arrangements it would probably be about two months before the Shanghai-Peking service would be started.

"The route will be direct from Vancouver to Shanghai and on to Peking with a refueling stop either in Alaska or Japan," he said.

"Frequency of the service has not yet been determined but will depend largely on the number of visitors the Peoples' Republic of China is able to accommodate."

The new agreement with West Germany permits Air Canada to land at two other cities in addition to Frankfurt, the only stop allowed under the old agreement.

Air Canada has also gained the right to pick up German passengers in these cities for onward flights to other countries, the transport minister said.

In exchange, the German airline Lufthansa has obtained permission to land at Toronto in addition to Montreal. Landing rights in Toronto to have been Canada's main bargaining point in recent air talks with foreign countries.

Marchand noted the government decision sticks to its policy of dividing world air routes among the two Canadian airlines.

Under this policy CP Air has been assigned Asia while Air Canada was granted northern Europe. There are some exceptions such as the CP Air route to Amsterdam.

The minister said Air Canada will choose the two new landing points in Germany.

The two Canadian airlines are still campaigning for the Milan franchise. Alitalia, the Italian airline, has been operating on its now route to Toronto since last autumn.

Marchand said last summer that it was "an abuse" to let CP Air fly to Europe at all because that territory should belong to Air Canada, a crown corporation. He made that remark before he became transport minister.

He said then there was a deep split in cabinet between Western Canadian ministers, who supported CP Air, and eastern Canadian ministers who backed Air Canada.

Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina Lake Centre) suggested Friday in the Commons that CP Air should not be allowed to have any routes to Europe. He was heckled by a number of Conservatives.

There has been speculation in Ottawa that the government was considering a trade-off between increased rights for Air Canada in West Germany and the Milan route for CP Air.

Air Canada now lands at Paris while CP Air has landing rights in Rome. Milan could be considered mid-way between the two territories.

When asked about the impact on Montreal of another airline landing in Toronto, Marchand said there is considerable pressure to allow more foreign airlines to land in the Ontario city. He pointed out that there are large German and Italian communities in Toronto.

The minister said Canada must give way on Toronto to gain additional rights in other countries.

Lufthansa is the third foreign airline to gain permission to land in Toronto. BOAC, the British airline, has had landing rights for years while Atlitalia obtained permission last year.

Most foreign flights to Canada land in Montreal.

Delay Mining Bill Association Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Mining Association of British Columbia wants a full enquiry into Bill 44, an act to amend the Mineral Act, before the bill is given second reading.

"It's is almost impossible to look at a statute like this and say it would not retard mining development in this country," said J. D. Little, vice-president of the association, at a news conference Thursday.

Principal objection of the group is discretionary powers the minister of mines would be given to grant or refuse a production lease for a prospective mine, even though the mining company had complied with all requirements of the act.

Little, executive vice-president of Placer Development Ltd., said in a letter to Premier Barret the bill could "greatly discourage prospecting and development . . . and frighten away investors who provide the risk capital the industry needs."

He said Thursday mining exploration and development might be "substantially" deterred if the legislation is adopted.

"Changes to land acts, the mining act, tax and other acts can pose significant problems for the industry which depends on secure title and conditions attractive to risk capital for vigor and growth," he said.

The association said it "does not accept, without the most serious reservations, the competence of the minister, his staff or his consultants in these areas of critical decision."

Chargex Rival?

MONTREAL (CP) — The Chargex card, until now the only bank charge card available in Canada, is in for a dose of competition as the Bank of Montreal prepares to enter the charge card field.

Fred McNeil, Bank of Montreal president, gave a clear indication of the bank's intention in an annual report to shareholders last December.

The bank, he said, "will be incurring substantial costs in connection with our mechanization project and the launching of a charge card."

This week the bank issued a notice saying it is planning an announcement "of major importance to Canadians to be made jointly with the Provincial Bank of Canada next Monday.

Banking officials believe the new card to be introduced by the Bank of Montreal will be linked to the Master Charge card system in the United States.

CATHOLIC?
Fellow Catholic laymen, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel is begging for more prayer, penance and sacrifice for our sins and the sins of the world. Will you heed Her pleadings and make this Lenten Season the beginning of a renewed, personal and private effort of prayer, penance and sacrifice, not only for your own benefit but for the spiritual benefit of the children of this Diocese who are in such dire need. When Our Lord set the example for Lent He did not gather a group for a "sensitivity session," nor did He select a committee to talk to death some world problem but rather He went alone into the desert to fast and pray in complete privacy for a full forty days.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Heroin "is such a vicious substance that it would cause children to steal from their parents," Judge William Ostler said Friday in Victoria Provincial Court.

He spoke after George Alexander English, 21, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a two-count Saanich charge of theft involving less than $200 and a Victoria charge of attempted false pretences.

A Saanich detective said English sold a $199 stereo set in his parent's home while they were out Wednesday for $30 plus cancellation of a $30 debt, then returned Thursday to take a $200 TV set and pawn it for $25. The other charge concerned an attempt Feb. 3 to get a refund at The Bay on a $25 jacket.

The detective said English had a heroin habit that once reached seven capsules a day but now was about 2½ a day and stole because he couldn't get help any other way and hoped to be sent to a forestry camp.

Ostler sentenced English to a total of five months definite and six months indeterminate, a forestry camp type of term.

"I will make the sentence as lenient as I can," Ostler told Stanley James Petne, 28, of 1727 Adanac, and then sentenced him to a total of nine months in jail — to which Petne said "thank you, sir."

Petne pleaded guilty Feb. 16 to a charge of possession of heroin after 10 capsules were found Oct. 26 in the basement of his residence. Thursday, he admitted this was a breach of probation.

Petne had two previous narcotics convictions. Ostler said this plus the probation breach plus higher-court views that heroin possession should mean jail came first but he should also consider a "sincere improvement" in Petne's attitude toward drugs.

Alistair Norman Bolton, 25, pleaded guilty to a Colwood RCMP charge of escaping late last Nov. 4 from the William Head institution in Metchosin, where he was serving three years imposed in mid-1972 at Duncan for break-ins, thefts and other offences.

Defence lawyer George Jones urged leniency because Bolton, once a heroin addict, stayed away from drugs between Nov. 4 and his recapture in Victoria three months later. He said Bolton had met "a very wonderful girl" and was trying to arrange a marriage through the Salvation Army.

Ostler said the incidence of escapes from William Head is "so great" that the public must be protected but sentenced Bolton to five months, slightly less than the normal term for an escape.

A warrant was issued by Ostler for Kent Curtis Kimberley Gordon, 27, formerly of 2270 Estevan, and proceedings were started for the forfeiture of his $1,000 bail.

Gordon failed to appear for trial on an Oak Bay charge of dangerous use of a firearm laid after an incident Dec. 3 at his home in which Ross Rutledge, 14, of 3131 Carman, received a serious wound from a .44 calibre revolver bullet.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Gordon was a U.S. citizen and indicated the missing man had returned to that country.

A charge against Daniel Arthur Lansall, 33, of 1243 Oscar, of criminal negligence causing death was withdrawn on application by Macintyre after Ostler criticized its wording.

The judge had pointed out the charge said the negligence was driving without due care and attention, which courts have stated is inadvertent negligence. Macintyre indicated a properly-worded charge would be available when a preliminary hearing begins April 13.

The charge resulted from the traffic death Jan. 29 of Mrs. Caroline Joy Browne, 23, of Valemount, B.C., after an accident on Bay near Bridge,

Randy Gordon Jones, 17, of 216 Michigan, was sentenced to a total of six months definite and six months indeterminate. He pleaded guilty Feb. 23 to a three-count charge of possession of narcotics and a restricted drug Feb. 14 when police found four capsules of MDA and small amounts of marijuana and hashish in his room.

□

Richard Robert MacLeod, 20, of 1300 Yates, was fined $75 following his plea of guilty to a charge of possession of hashish Thursday when police checked his apartment.

Holdup Suspect Freed, Police Lack Evidence

Victoria police said Friday they released a suspect during the early morning hours in their investigation of a $450 holdup at midnight Thursday and said lack of evidence was the reason for the release.

Police said the suspect had seemed high on drugs when he entered the Douglas Mohawk Service station, 3005 Douglas, at about 9 p.m. Thursday to ask about a job.

They said the man also said at one point to attendant Ian Mark Bradley, 17: "How would you like to be robbed?"

At midnight, Bradley was making up the daily bank deposit and standing behind a counter in the main office when a young man carrying a knife and wearing a silk stocking over his face entered and said:

The man forced Bradley to lie face down on the floor behind the counter and kept him pinned down by puting one knee in Bradley's back. He tried to put packaging tape over Bradley's mouth but it didn't work.

Bradley heard movements at the till which indicated another person was there, then heard the main door open. The masked man told him: "Don't get up for five minutes. There is a guy outside with a gun."

The robber left and Bradley went outside to catch what police called "a brief glimpse" of two males running across a vacant field beside the station. Police found a knife on the counter by the till and two pieces of tape and a silk stocking on the floor nearby.

Between $400 and $500 was missing from the till — all in bills. No change was taken.

After Bradley phoned police, a man phoned to advise him not to tell police who he might think the robber was. The caller threatened Bradley's wife and added that "I know where you live."

The knife wielder was described as five feet, nine inches tall, of slight build and with light brown hair. The other runner may have been shorter and both wore light-colored clothing.

Friends of the Needy

Group Speaks Up

That most silent of Greater Victoria's friends of the needy, the Victoria Foundation, has decided to speak up, a little, to let its aims be known.

The foundation has just published the first of what will be "periodic" bulletins intended to "provide information regarding the activities and the interests" of the foundation.

Incorporated by a private act of the B.C. Legislature in April, 1936, the foundation's role is, briefly, to accept charitable gifts and legacies and to see that the expressed charitable intentions are carried out.

Its informative years coincided with the late depression years, so during that time and the Second World War the foundation was dormant. It resumed activity in 1966 and since has taken an increasing part in helping with grants organizations for which funds might not otherwise be available.

Grants are made from the interest on a portion of the capital held by the Foundation, and may be of a charitable nature or for a specific purpose as indicated by any donor.

Organizations helped recently include Fernwood House, Victoria for Autistic Children, the Maritime Museum, Family Planning Association of B.C., Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded, Boys' Club of Victoria, the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Victoria Churches' Group Homes Association, Bastion Theatre Studio Society, The Daily Colonist 500 Fund.

Last summer the Foundation entered a new field, feeling a need for help to students in the pre-university and vocational fields. One bursary has already been given to a student at Camosun College.

The first newsletter also pays tribute to the late Col. R. O. Bull, one of the founders of Victoria's Boys' Club and for many years an active member of the Foundation Advisory Board.

Bargaining Unfinished

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue and catcher Dave Duncan, who have unfinished bargaining to do with owner Charles O. Finley on their Oakland Athletics contracts, have joined the world champion's baseball training camp.

The two arrived from Oakland Thursday night, and manager Dick Williams said he thought they would need about 10 days to catch up on conditioning.

Whether Blue, 1971 Cy Young award winner, will be with the club on opening day is not certain. Both Finley and Williams have labeled as "speculation" a report that the left-hander might be traded to Texas Rangers.

Overtime Needed To Decide Junior Openers

By GLEN PHILLIPS

University of Manitoba Bisons ran into unexpectedly stiff opposition from the host side Friday night as they started their quest for a third straight Canadian junior men's basketball championship.

London Boxing Club of Victoria put a scare into the Bisons before yielding, 79-77, in overtime at Central Junior High School. And it was the second game of the four-team, round-robin tournament requiring extra time.

Windsor AKOs won, 89-82, over Memorial University of Newfoundland in the overtime opener.

Manitoba needed every one of its players to top Boxing Club, which was virtually a three-man team. Jim MacKay, Duff McCaghey and Sid Chow provided the individual heroics but it was Manitoba's bench which finally prevailed.

Nick Dyck, who scored but five points in four quarters of play, came on with six in overtime to produce the Bison victory. Manitoba's two all-star guards, Cam McGuinness and Randy Kusano, managed only 13 points between them but Bisons were saved by balanced scoring as coach John Gurban made wholesale substitutions throughout the game.

McCaghey led all scorers with 25 points and along with Chow, who had 22, kept Victoria within reach of the Bisons with their timely outside shooting. MacKay, at centre, handled himself well inside against the bigger Bisons and scored 22 points.

Manitoba led at the half by 31-26 but with a pesky defense and a half-court press, the Victorians tied it up in the fourth quarter continually hitting on pressure shots. They had control of the ball with 55 seconds left in regulation time and the game tied at 66-66 but Chow put up an ill-timed shot and missed.

In overtime, Manitoba built a five-point lead but three times McCaghey hit from the outside. Then with the score at 79-77 MacKay twice had short jumpers to tie it up — but missed.

Brian Rumsey and Larry Randall led Bisons with 17 points each.

The first game was similarly dramatic as the physically more imposing Windsor team built a first-half lead of five points on strong rebounding and superior ball-handling. But with some precision shooting and clever defence Memorial fought back from a 11-point deficit in the third quarter and went ahead by seven points before AKOs regained control of the boards to tie the game at 76-76 in regulation time.

Centre4 Ron Tobin battled the bigger AKO inside and scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half.

In the five-minute overtime session, Jim Chase scored seven of his 15 points as Windsor pulled away for a seven margin at the buzzer. Frank Lasorda, who sparked AKOs late surge, finished tied for the game high of 21 points with teammate Greg Marchant.

WINDSOR (89) — Frank Lesorda 21, Bert Smith 6, Dan Devin 14, Jim Chase 15, Jim Ninello 2, Greg Marchant 21, Mark Fedikow 2, Rick Jolicoeur 8, Pete McMahon, Greg Peck.

UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA (79) — Brian Rumsey 17, Cam McGinnis 9, Randy Kusand 4, Larry Randall 17, Nick Dyck 11, Roger McBride 11, Doug Puthaert 2, Bob Luba, Manfred Seidel 6, John Fisher 2.

Regina Quartet Clinches Title With Victory over Chief Rival

EDMONTON (CP) — Harvey Mazinke's Regina rink, equally capable on slick ice and slow, coasted to the Canadian curling championship Friday night by beating its chief rival, the New Brunswick rink skipped by Lou Dugre of Chatham.

It took a pair of surprising misses by Dugre to lift Saskatchewan to a 9-5 victory for its first Canadian title since 1963 when Ernie Richardson of Regina skipped the winners.

Mazinke, who admitted "I was shocked" when Dugre missed his last two draw attempts, will represent Canada in the world curling championships in Regina March 19-24.

Dugre, a 27-year-old public relations man with the Canadian armed forces at Chatham, had a chance to force an extra end by taking out a Saskatchewan stone in the front of the four-foot ring and staying for shot.

Whe Dugre came out light, two meaningless rocks on the sides in the 12-foot circle also counted, giving Saskatchewan what appeared a substantial margin.

The margin was not substantial at all.

Dugre, aided by third Joe Klein, second Dave Romkey and lead Doug Wiggiss, had chances to win it. He managed to set up a two-count on the 10th end to lead by 5-3. But his front end put him under pressure in the 11th and he rolled out after hitting a Saskatchewan stone with his last shot, leaving Mazinke to count three and open a one-rock lead heading for home.

Throughout the week, Dugre had showed his ability to make clutch shots in the late stages, but this time he missed.

"They didn't give us anything," said Mazinke, 35, who manages an equipment company in Regina. "They made us work all the way."

Before the game, Dugre was aware he needed a win to keep his hopes alive. Saskatchewan entered the match with only one loss while New Brunswick and British Columbia had three.

The Saskatchewan victory made today's draw meaningless.

Mazinke received excellent support from his rink all week, led by third Bill Martin. George Achtymichuk was at second and Dan Klippenstein at lead on the rink, which has curled together for six years.

It was the second visit to the Brier for Mazinke, who played third for Bruce Hudson of Winnipeg in 1964. His Regina rink had finished second in the Saskatchewan playoffs four times and holds several important titles around Regina.

Before this week, Dugre's major claim to prominence was a victory in the 1971 Canadian Legion championship.

The attention of about 5000 fans was riveted in the Mazinke-Dugre confrontation as high scores dominated all other games.

The Northern Ontario rink, skipped by Don Harry of Sudbury, blasted British Columbia's Jack Tucker of Richmond, 18-7, to leave B.C. tied with New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Ontario in second place with identical records of five wins and four losses.

Tucker made a bold bid for victory, striking for three on the first and one on the second end, but Northern Ontario rebounded with five on the third and didn't look back.

Paul Savage, an erratic southpaw from Scarborough, had an easy time leading his partners over Bob Dillon, the Prince Edward Island skip from Charlottetown, to join the second-place tie. Ontario counted on seven consecutive ends after falling behind 2-0 in the first three and finished with a 13-4 decision.

Bye: Nova Scotia.

The other fourth-place rink with one draw remaining is the Peter Hope quartet of Dartmouth, representing Nova Scotia. Hope and his mates had the bye in the 10th round Friday night.

Alberta's Mel Watchorn of Fairview clouted the erratic Newfoundland rink, skipped by Jim Ward of Labrador City, 17-3, and Quebec's Dave Moon of Montreal tagged Manitoba's Danny Fink rink from Winnipeg with a 14-10 whipping after trailing by 10-8 with two ends to play.

A costly loss to British Columbia in the ninth round helped seal New Brunswick's fate. Tucker and his mates, operated without second Jim Armstrong who retired Thursday night with an injured wrist, upset New Brunswick while Saskatchewan flipped Ontario, 9-6.

In other ninth-round games, Newfoundland downed Manitoba, 12-6, Prince Edward Island bounced Quebec, 11-7, and Nova Scotia whipped Northern Ontario, 7-5.

The final round, in which Newfoundland draws the bye, has nothing at stake except personal and provincial records.

The easy Saskatchewan victory was something of a disaster for officials of the championship, who hoped the final round would have some impact for CBC viewers.

For the first time, the championship event this year was scheduled for six days, to erase a third draw on Thursday and establish a television appearance on Saturday.

Sidelined Armstrong Won't Miss Mixed

EDMONTON (CP) — Curlers in the Canadian men's curling championship win a purple heart emblem to symbolize their feat.

Jim Armstrong, the dentistry student who plays second for British Columbia has earned one this week.

A rugged 22-year-old former Victorian in his first national final, Armstrong was forced to quit sweeping Thursday night during the eighth round when injured ligaments in his wrist gave out completely.

Before the wrist gave out, Armstrong and lead Gerry Peckham, also 22, had given skip Jack Tucker and third Bernie Sparkes of the Richmond club strong sweeping in their bid for the championship.

Armstrong made his contribution despite ugly blisters on both hands, which he covered with tape. He had taken painkilling injections throughout the competition but by the ninth end — when the broom finally flew out of his hands and he stepped off the ice in pain — even these didn't help.

Armstrong talked of having a cast put on his wrist so he could continue for the remaining three draws of the 11-rink round-robin competition, but he was not able to continue.

The youngster, who won the B.C. schoolboy championship in 1967 and the B.C. Winter Games championship while teamed with Peckham in 1971, was replaced as a sweeper by Warren Hassen of Edmonton, who has curled in top-level competition with skips such as former Canadian champion Hector Gervais of Edmonton.

Hansen is the second man allowed into the national final exclusively to sweep in an emergency. The first was Keith Lawes, who replaced Les Bowering of Bob Cole's Newfoundland rink in 1971 at Quebec City.

Armstrong, a stocky 210-pounder, said the injury would not prevent him from competing in the Canadian mixed championship at Charlottetown later this month. Armstrong and Peckham are both on the mixed rink.

"It happened before," he said. "A small tear developed in one of the ligaments at that time.

"I'll get the wrist looked at again when I get home," he said, "but I can't see me missing the trip to Charlottetown.

Hornet Rally Nips Rams Earns Island Final Date

By DON COLLINS

Gary Budd appeared through the steam in the locker room literally reeling from the heady intoxication of a moment he may never recapture.

"Fantastic," he panted, fighting for breath and looking down from what appeared at the moment to be more than his normal six-feet-five-inch height. "Fantastic."

It was hardly the word for it. Minutes before the kid who has had all kinds of aches and pains and physical troubles growing so fast and high, fired a basket from outside with exactly one second left to give Mount View Hornets a 45-43 win over Mount Douglas Rams.

The come from behind win (Budd sank two foul shots to tie the score with 1:10 left) puts Mount View in the final against Oak Bay Bays tonight for the Vancouver Island Boys High School Basketball championship.

The winner takes the Colonist Cup and, with the second and third place teams in the tournament, advances to the B.C. finals in Vancouver March 14 to 17.

The powerful Bays, tournament favorites, fell behind Campbell River Tyees in the second evening game, but woke up in lots of time to punish their game but less experienced rivals, 65-48.

Oak Bay coach Don Horwood has lots of respect for Mount View, the team that gave his boys their only beating of the season during the regular schedule. He said it will take an all-out effort to clinch the title.

Of the Campbell River team, Horwood said: "They were a game and aggressive bunch of kids. They never gave up."

And they didn't. They scored the first four points of the game and last eight after trailing, 65-40.

But there was no way this game could compare with the storybook finish of the earlier encounter. Mount View had been tied 22-22 at halftime with Mount Douglas and was down by seven points later before storming back with the final second touch that touched off an explosion of noise from about 1,000 fans in the University of Victoria gymnasium.

Kevin Gilbert, a lighning fast opportunist led the Mount View scoring with 13 points, followed by Budd with 11 and Dave Hagstrom with 10. Big men for a bitterly disappointed Mount Douglas were Rick ones with 13 and Doug Mosher with 12.

Chris Trumpy proved to be a one-man wrecking crew for Oak Bay, scoring 24 points. For Campbell River, Clint Cameron was a standout with 19.

In other games Nanaimo beat Cowichan, 63-56, and Powell River topped Victoria High Totems, 45-44, bringing a disappointing ending to a season for a team that faded in the later stages after appearing like a contender

And while the Totems sat quietly on the sidelines big Gary Budd, the noise of trumpets, voices and general bedlam still ringing in his ears, caught his breath in the steamy locker rooom.

"I had the confidence we could do it in the last quarter and we did. Now we're going to take the whole bloomin' thing."

WHA May Be Loser in TV Fight

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist TV Writer

The struggling World Hockey Association may have received a fatal blow from a television sports fight where it was merely a spectator — the battle between ABC and CBS for National Basketball Association games.

CBS and the long-established basketball league this week announced signing of a three-year contract in which the network paid an estimated $27 millios for rights to show NBA games from the start of the 1973-74 season through the 1976 playoffs.

Most of the reaction has been over ABC's decision to sue in an attempt to keep the popular NBA games which it shows each Sunday. But sources in the TV industry said Friday the contract could do worse damage to the WHA than to the losing network.

Last year, NBC negotiated the National Hockey League games seen in the U.S. each winter and spring away from CBS when the latter, which had first refusal rights for a new contract, failed to meet all NHL demands.

This came after several seasons in which CBS slowly built NHL hockey into a health position in the television ratings. It left CBS without major sports for Sundays in the period between the end of pro football and the summer.

So CBS threw in some tennis, a weekly "sports spectacular" and a few WHA games, giving the NHL rival some of the money and much of the respectability it needs to stay alive. If the WHA is dropped by CBS, it will have to go to ABC and start building again — provided ABC wants it.

Recent Sunday sports ratings put the NBA well ahead of the competition. The "sports spectacular" is second, NHL hockey is doing poorly on NBC and the WHA is dead last.

ABC's lawsuit is against CBS, the NBA and several basketball executives. It says NBA demands for a new contract were "deliberately drawn to make it impossible for ABC to accept."

One of these was a demand for seven NBA games on Saturday afternoons in the fall, when ABC is required by contract to broadcast U.S. college football games which draw bigger audiences.

Sabre Playoff Hopes Dimmed by Canucks

Canucks, who have been derided for their lackadasical play in the National Hockey League this season, came up with one of their best games and took a 5-2 victory.

The win will mean little to the Canuck standing in the East Division but the decision may have cost the Sabres, who entered the league with the Canucks in 1970, the chance to compete in the playoffs for the first time.

Sabres jumped to the lead on veteran Tim Horton's first goal of the season but the score was tied in the ninth minute when Andre Boudrias was awarded a penalty shot, the first for the Canucks in the NHL.

The stocky centre made no mistake, putting the puck cleanly past goalkeeper Roger Crozier, who had been penalized for throwing his stick at the puck.

Bobby Lalonde gave Canucks the lead before the period ended but Gil Perrault evened the score with a 50-foot drive that trickled through goalkeeper Dunc Wilson's pads in the second period.

Sabres also fell 11 points behind third-place Boston when the Bruins nipped Atlanta Flames, 3-2, in the only other game Friday.

Trevino Slips to 70 But Holds Big Lead

MIAMI (AP) — Lee Trevino slipped slightly from his fantastic opening pace but fashioned a two-under-par 70 and retained a four-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament.

Trevino, who had 64 in Thursday's opening round, had a 36-hole total of 134—10 under par on the 7065-yard Blue Monster Course at the Doral Country Club.

His four-stroke margin over Rod Curl matched the biggest two-round lead of the year on the pro tour.

"That's about the only thing I'm happy with," said Trevino, winner of the rich Jackie Gleason trounament just two weeks ago. "I didn't play nearly as good as I did yesterday.

Defending-champion Jack Nicklaus, the man considered most likely to walk off with the $30,000 first prize, all but shot himself out of it.

Nicklaus took a 74, his highest score of the year. He was two under par for the day before the round was held up for a half-hour by a thundershower, then played his last 15 holes four over par. At 143, Nicklaus was nine strokes back of Trevino.

Curl had a 68 before the dark, grey clouds rolled in with afternoon showers and drizzle.

His 138 total put him one stroke ahead of Dave Hill and Bobby Mitchell. Mitchell had a 68 and Hill 69.

Blancas's 66 was the day's best round.

Sixty-year-old Sam Snead went to a 76 for 146 and just survived the cut for the final two rounds today and Sunday.

It took a score of 146 to make it and among the casualties were the two Canadians in the event. Ben Kern of Toronto fired a 74 for 147 while Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg carded his second 75. Tour regulars Chi Chi Rodriquez and Doug Sanders also missed.

Centennials, third in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League, stopped the visiting Cougars, 5-2, before only 1455 fans at the Corral.

Last season, Cougars won three games and lost five against the powerful Centennials.

The victory pulled Calgary to within four points of Edmonton Oil Kings and Medicine Hat Tigers, tied for the lead with 79 points.

Centennials, however, will have difficulty improving their position because the Oil Kings hold two games in hand and Medicine Hat one. Calgary has only five games remaining.

Ed Boucha scored both goals for the fifth-place Cougars, who trailed by 2-0 after one period and by 4-2 after 40 minutes.

Cougar goalkeeper Perry Mulhall made 32 saves, five more than Doug Sauter, who was filling in for Calgary's regular netminder, John Davidson.

The loss, third straight for the Cougars, opened a four-game-in-four night swing through Alberta that continues tonight in Medicine Hat, Sunday in Edmonton and Monday in Medicine Hat.

In other Friday action, Flin Flon Bombers maintained their slim chance of finishing first in the Eastern Division by tripping the front-running Saskatoon Blades, 7-5; Winnipeg Jets upset Brandon Wheat Kings, 5-2, and Regina Pats blasted Vancouver Nats, 8-3.

At Flin Flon, rookie Kelly Secord scored twice late in the third period to snap a 5-5 tie.

Waune Bianchin also scored two goals for Bombers, who are five points behind the Blades.

Any Blade victory or Bomber loss will assure Saskatoon of its first division title since joining the WCHL several years ago.

At Regina, the Pats took advantage of the Wheat King loss and moved ahead of Brandon in the Eastern Division race.

Clark Gillies paced the Pats with three goals and linemate Dennis Sobchuk potted two, his 60th and 61th of the season. Sobchuk also added two assists to move within one point of the league's leading scorer, Tom Lysiak of Medicine Hat.

T-Birds Here Today

Goals may be at a premium today in the Pacific Coast Soccer League game between Victoria Gorge Molsons and University of B.C. Thunderbirds in Royal Athletic Park. Game time is 2 p.m.

Both teams have outstanding goalkeepers who have been near-unbeatable in recent games.

Graham Lee of Gorge has allowed only 20 goals in 15 games while Greg Weber of UBC, goalkeeper for Canada's national team, has a sparkling goals-against average of 1.0 in 10 games.

Gorge, which has played five more games than UBC, will be out to regain a share of first place, presently held by rival Victoria West-United.

Hosts Hold Top Hand In Cricket

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — West Indies held the upper hand at the end of the first day's play Friday in the second cricket test match against Australia.

Apart from a superb third-wicket partnership of 129 between the Chappell brothers, Ian and Greg, the Australians struggled to take advantage of batting first on a good batting pitch at Kensington Oval.

Greg scored 106 — his fifth test century — and Ian 72, but at the close they were 243 for six wickets.

The West Indies made early inroads into the Australian innings when they captured the wickets of openers Keith Stackpole and Ian Redpath with only 19 runs scored, both caught at first slip by West Indies captain Rohan Kanhai.

It was at this stage that the Chappells set about rebuilding the ruins. They saw the score through to 84 at lunch and afterwards got on top of the West Indian bowling with a superb display of batting.

In the end it took a fine throw from fielder Maurice Foster at deep squareleg to run out Ian Chappell after an innings which lasted three hours five minutes and included 13 fours.

After this dismissal, Australia seldom looked as if it would build up a big first innings total — despite the fact that Greg Chappell moved on to his century.

In all, he batted four hours 20 minutes and hit 10 boundaries.

Hooking a Rug Is One Thing

But Making One For Less than $5 Is Something Else

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Sitting in a wheelchair, nursing a broken hip for six months, usually isn't a valuable experience.

But 14 years ago when Kit Mawhood broke her hip and was bored with nothing to do, a friend taught her how to hook rugs — and Mrs. Mawhood found she had a real talent for it.

She learned all she could about the craft, joined a local guild, taught classes and made many beautiful rugs. Last summer she and her husband moved here from Ontario after he retired, settling in Brentwood.

Their home at 7002 Wallace Drive is full of her work, with some of the rugs hung on the wall or covering chairs as well as scattered over the floor.

Already she is teaching a small class of women, and instructing children ages 10 and 11 in the rudiments of the craft at Brentwood elementary Friday afternoons.

But she's surprised and disappointed to find that hooking rugs isn't as popular here as in Ontario, where thousands of women do it and have formed several guilds to promote the craft.

"It's very big in Ontario, but I couldn't find anybody here who did it, so I started a class in Brentwood — just so I could have somebody to talk to about it," she says.

North America's biggest supplier of equipment and materials for rug-hooking is in that province, and there aren't any outlets here. So she has to send to Ontario for everything, "and the postage is murder."

The craft first became popular among North America women in pioneer days, because they could furnish their cabins quite cheaply using the available materials such as burlap and wool from old clothes.

With a hook fashioned from a nail or the tine of a broken fork, they had everything they needed to make attractive rugs and wall-hangings for their homes.

Mrs. Mawhood prefers the tapestry method when hooking rugs, rather than the latch-hook method, and for shading, she uses a type common to New England.

To hook a rug, you need good quality wool fabric cut into strips. Purists say these should be cut by hand, but Mrs. Mawhood uses what she calls "a glorified pencil sharpener."

Wool swatches can be bought from the firm in Ontario, or if you want them more inexpensively, taken from used clothing on sale in the city's many thrift shops.

"If you find a skirt in good condition, you feel as if you've come up with a $10 bill," she says.

The strips of fabric are then pulled through a piece of burlap with the design of the rug on it, with the hook as the instrument.

Pressure keeps the loops together after the rug is completed, although it can be pulled out, "if you're miserable enough to do that."

Shading on the design is done with swatches of fabric about six inches wide. She used to do her own dyeing, but didn't bring her equipment with her when she moved.

Designs for the rugs can also be purchased, but Mrs. Mawhood often gets patterns from old designs she sketches or finds in antique stores. "You can get all sorts of ideas just by going into downtown Victoria," she says.

Cost of making a rug varies, depending on whether or not you use new materials.

"You can make a nice rug for less than $5, including the burlap, or you can spend $25 to $35 using new materials," she explains.

The biggest one she ever made was three and a half feet wide and seven feet long. Some of her rugs are on sale in Christie's Wool Shop in Victoria; others she keeps herself or gives away as wedding gifts or presents.

"It's a lot of fun — you can be very creative. Probably I like it so much because it's the only thing I've ever really been good at."

She would like to teach a class once a week, if possible — the sessions at Brentwood elementary are only for another month. She certainly is in demand there, however.

She has one boy in that class, she says, "and they didn't want him in — but he begged and pleaded so they let him come."

Obviously, a liberated male.

Guaranteed Income Best Remedy for Nutrition Ills

OTTAWA (UPI) — A guaranteed annual income is the single most important step towards ensuring all Canadians have nutritional diets, the National Council of Welfare said Thursday.

In a report to the national health and welfare department, the council said that a family annual income had a direct affect on its eating habits.

Although the report, entitled One Child, one Chance, was a study of nutrition, the council pointed out that to discuss nutrition necessarily meant the discussion of poverty.

"For as long as poverty persists, children continue to be born of poorly nourished mothers. They will be raised and try to make their way through school less well nourished than they have a right to be."

The council said "the most important single step towards ensuring nutritional adequacy in the diets of all Canadians is the provision of a guaranteed annual income to meet the basic needs of all Canadians."

Health Minister Marc Lalonde told newsmen he hoped that when he met with provincial health ministers at the end of April "we would be able to agree on something better than what we have now in the field of social security."

In the report, the council stressed the direct link between a family's income and its diet, noting children from low income families were in poorer health condition than those from more comfortable homes.

"For at least one group in the population the issue is simply the impoverished conditions in which their children grow. The problems of poor children spring from the fact of their poverty.

"Their fathers came from poverty only to work for long hours for poverty wages. Their mothers came from poverty too, bearing children too soon, in poor health, with little or no mdeical care.

"The children themselves are frequently undersized, more often sick, disabled and without access to care, poorly fed and poorly housed, exposed to disease in their homes and neighborhoods and schools, the council said.

The council said that although the problem may be too vast to solve entirely, some steps should be taken immediately to at least alleviate the situation.

It suggested a national commitment to ensure adequate nutrition for all pregnant women and infants; nutritional breakfasts and lunches at school for all young children and better information programs on nutrition through advertising and labelling.

Lalonde said he was awaiting the results of another "massive" nutrition survey by Nutrition Canada, which are expected this fall. "I would hope that out of that particular survey we can get much better policy on nutrition," the health minister said.

Refusal of Credit Insult to Women

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., proposed legislation Thursday to end what she termed "insulting" discrimination gainst working women by stores and credit companies.

Her bill would make it a crime for creditors to discriminate on the basis of sex or marital status in issuing charge accounts or credit cards—a practice which she said is rampant throughout the country.

A similar measure was introduced in the Senate last month by Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J.

Mrs. Heckler said most stores and credit card companies will not issue a married, divorced or widowed woman credit in her own name. If she is married, the credit is in her husband's name only, no matter what her own income, and once she is no longer married, she loses that credit, the Congresswoman said.

"For a married woman who is working, present credit practices are insulting," she said. "For a woman who has lost her husband through death or divorce, these practices work a very severe hardship."

Chinese Women Still Lacking Job Equality

TOKYO (CP) — China conceded today that although its women have made some giant strides toward equality with men, they still are riscriminated against in job selection, wages and marriage.

In an editorial marking International Women's Day, the People's Daily said:

"The victory of the democratic revolution and the socialist revolution in our country has opened a broad road to women's emancipation. Women and men are equal in the political, economic and cultural fields and in domestic life.

"But China was under feudal rule for 2,000 years, and the exploiting classes left behind them deep-rooted ideas in which women are discriminated against and looked upon as slaves and appendages. Classes and class struggle still exist in our country at present; it is impossible to wipe out the remnants of the old ideas of looking down upon women."

The paper indicated that discrimination in pay and job selection is among the things still to be eliminated.

"Men and women must receive equal pay for equal work" it said.

"No factory should discriminate against women when recruiting new workers. We must do away with old customs and habits in marriage and establish new socialist standards."

Risk 'Exaggerated'

WASHINGTON (AP) — While admitting that certain mechanical factors of microwave ovens could be improved, the federal Food and Drug Administration said Thursday the magazine Consumer Reports exaggerated the dangers to human health.

"I was very disappointed by the position taken by Consumers Union," said John Villforth, director of the FDA's bureau of radiological health.

He was questioned at a Senate commerce committee hearing on proposed legislation to tighten controls on the use of radiation devices.

Consumers Union, a nonprofit testing organization, warned the public in a report Wednesday agaisst buying any model of microwave oven as all 15 models of microwave ovens on the market leak radiation.

"Certain aspects of the oven design could be improved, said Villforth. "We have advised manufacturers and have effected some changes."

Guide Michelin

Leading Chefs Seeing Stars

PARIS (UPI) — The 1973 rating of French restaurants by the Guide Michelin has been released and there is no reason for chefs to commit suicide.

The guide, a high court of no appeal which awards from three stars for the best restaurants to no stars for the ordinary eatery, awarded 16 establishments with the highest rank, an increase of four such restaurants since last year and the greatest number ever. All 12 three-star establishments of last year's edition kept their stars this year.

But the number of good little restaurants has dwindled, according to Michelin.

Two of the new three-starred restaurants are in Paris — Taillevent, featuring poulet aux ecrevisses, or chicken with shrimp, and crepes soufflees, a combination souffle-pancake; and Vivarois, a new restaurant with spectacular success which won its first star when it opened in 1966, its second in 1971 and now its third.

The region of Lyon, already known as the best eating area of France, gathered two more three-star restaurants: Pic in the town of Valence, which features sea bass with caviar, and La Mere Charles at Mionnay, where the specialties include hot eel paste and lobster salad.

Michelin listed 60 two-star restaurants this year compared with 64 for 1972, which in effect means no change. Four of last year's two-stars were elevated to three stars.

Scholarship Tribute

Memorial scholarship fund has been started in England and Mahone, N.S., in honor of Judith Hill, English-born nurse who died in airplane crash Nov. 8 during mercy flight in North West Territories. She is shown holding a baby at a hospital in Devonshire, England, before coming to Canada.

Magic Number

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet mother of five is on the road to glory. She really arrives when her 10th child is born.

Trying to counteract a declining national birth rate — from 24.9 per 1,000 in 1960 to 17 per 1,000 in 1970 — the Soviet Union encourages large families by rewards of money and medals.

Mothers of five or six children receive the maternity medal. Those with seven, eight or nine win the Order of Motherhood glory.

The pinnacle, awarded for 10 and up is the title Mother-Heroine of the Soviet Union.

Officials say more than three million Soviet mothers receive monthly allowances from the state for having five or more offspring.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a young woman who wanted to know if she should marry a wonderful man who "wasn't very communicative." She said she was starved for conversation, that sometimes an hour would pass and he would answer questions with a "yes" or a "no" and not say another word. She described him as "not very outgoing" and said, "I'm sure he's shy and after we are married he'll be more confident."

May I say a word to that young girl, Ann?

Dear Young Lady: If you marry that quiet fellow you'll regret it. I know because I married one just like him. During our courtship he was pensive and quiet. I thought he was just introverted and I would bring him out of it. What a mistake that was!

After marriage he clammed up for days and I never heard his voice. He'd move his head up and down for "yes" and from side to side for "no."

For five years I put up with silence and finally I became so nervous and frustrated I went to see a doctor. He told me, "The man is sick and he is making you sick, too. Get him to a psychiatrist or get a divorce."

My husband refused to go to a psychiatrist, so I divorced him.

That was 12 years ago and I thank my lucky stars I had the courage to take the doctor's advice. Ann Landers has often said, "Don't marry a man thinking that you will improve him. Chances are he'll get worse." Please take Ann's word for it. She's right.—Old Vet.

Dear Vet: I hope you get through to the girl and to others who are in that same leaky canoe.

Dear Ann Landers: Ten years ago my aunt and uncle gave us a beautiful high chair when our first baby was born. We used that chair for the next two kids and then put it in the storage room. Last week we decided to get rid of a lot of things because we plan to move. I ran an ad and sold 12 items, including the high chair. My aunt heard about it and said I had no right to sell their gift. She claims I should have given the high chair back to her. Now both my aunt and uncle are mad at me. Did I do wrong?—Small War

Dear Small War: The high chair was yours and you had the right to do with it as you pleased.

Life Begins at 50 for This Electric Stove

'War of Nerves'

Food Price Freeze Ruled Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz Friday rules out a freeze on United States food prices, joining the White House in counselling consumer patience.

But other Nixon administration officials conceded the food price crunch will worsen before its gets better. "It's going to be tough the next few months, really tough," said a Cost of Living Council official.

Butz, appearing before a newspaper group, said "My answer is no" on the question of a food price freeze. He said a "war of nerves" is being waged over food prices, but said consumers are lucky that farm products have been exempt thus far from controls.

Contending that farm-level controls would dry up supplies, Butz said: "It's better to have the price at $1.59 per pound with the rib roast there, than at $1.19 with the rib roast not there."

President Nixon and other adminstration officials have said that steps now being taken to bolster supplies should bring a levelling off in food prices during the second half of the year. Until then, government economists predict a continued upward spiral.

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI) — Women members of the Queensland Flute Guild have received an appeal from the orchestra's president.

Tories Call for 90-Day Cooler

Food Prices Up 100 Per Cent in Year

OTTAWA (UPI) — Food prices rose 1.1 per cent January and February, pushing the consumer price index to 145.3 in February from 144.5 the month before, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The over-all January-February increase in the CPI was 0.6 per cent, putting the index 5.8 per cent higher than a year ago. The CPI, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 137.3 last February.

Food prices have been the major force behind the increase and the announcement Friday food prices have increased 100.2 per cent in the past year turned the House of Commons question period into a debate.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield asked if the government was now prepared to announce and implement its contingency plan for handling any emergency inflation situation.

Acting prime minister Mitchell Sharp replied "no."

Later in the debate however, Sharp added it would be "most unwise if one were going to implement price and wage controls to give any notice whatsoever of the government's intentions."

Sharp later told newsmen outside the Commons that to procede otherwise would create more inflation and the point at which the controls would have to be imposed would be reached much sooner.

He noted the figures released Friday came just before the Feb. 10 budget which announced a number of taxes and tariffs on foods and other items would be reduced or eliminated.

He added a special House committee was now studying the causes of price increases and that even Conservatives did not appear to be calling for controls on food prices.

Stanfield told newsmen the public would have responded to what he termed "real leadership" on the part of the government.

He said the Conservative position was that a 90-day freeze should be declared on all prices other than those of fresh vegetables.

He added that while food prices at the border could not be controlled, controls were possible on markups and increases in prices for processing.

"I am not critical of the (food prices) committee. I am very critical, however, of the government for using the committee as an excuse to do nothing. It is the government's responsibility to show leadership," Stanfield said.

With the 0.6 per cent increase in February, the CPI was 5.8 per cent higher than its level a year earlier and food prices were 10.2 per cent above those in February, 1972.

The consumer dollar of 1961 was worth 69 cents last month.

Between January and February, food prices showed an increase of 1.1 per cent and the cost of shelter rose by 0.7 per cent.

The only item which declined from January to February was clothing which dropped 0.2 per cent, due in part to seasonal sales on men's clothing which drove men's clothing prices down 0.9 per cent.

Higher food prices were attributed mainly to a 4.5 per cent increase in beef prices, a 6.1 per cent increase in pork and a 3.5 per cent gain in poultry prices. The meat, fish and poultry index was 17 per cent higher than its level a year earlier with pork alone showing a 26 per cent increase in the year.

Vegetable prices, however, which normally rise in February declined 1.7 per cent but the index was 9.3 per cent higher than in February, 1972.

Science Sect Gaining

Christian Scientists all over the world are gaining greater legal recognition because evidence is mounting that their religion is a viable and successful method of solving ills of every kind, William Hill told members of First Church in Victoria this week.

He returned recently from a conference at church headquarters in Boston where he represented B.C. as one of more than 140 delegates from 50 countries and six continents meeting to consider the increased recognition of Christian Science as a worldwide movement.

Using a tape-slide program he showed his audience the vital importance of each one praying understandingly on a daily basis for elimination of evil and establishment of God's government over both individuals and nations."

Group Needs Articles To Sell

Youths Plan Auction

The diocesan youth leadership training council will hold an auction in St. John's Anglican hall from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 24, to raise money for its activities.

The council is looking for donations of books, furniture, toys and other articles for the auction. Ian Pennington is arranging for pickup of items and may be reached at 383-3690 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. weekdays.

The council was formed three years ago to follow up leadership training programs held for the church's Camp Columbia on Thetis Island. The young people conducted training weekends in Victoria, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Campbell River.

Aims of the council are to encourage and stimulate a growing interest in Christian leadership among diocesan youth, encourage a Christian commitment and develop youth leaders for diocesan and other youth groups and for service in the community.

Jehovah's Witnesses Meet

Divine Rulership

An audience of 1,300 people heard district supervisor Ernest Funk of Jehovah's Witnesses give the key speech of the sect's two-day circuit assembly which ended Sunday in S. J. Willis School.

Funk told his audience that, in a world accustomed to frequent changes of government and violent political coups, each one must decide personally whether he will advocate divine rulership.

The standards are high, he said, but each one following them can gain many benefits — a happy family life, high moral standards and lasting peace.

The previous day he stressed the importance of regular Bible reading for families.

"We need to get well acquainted with the laws and principles set out in God's word," he said, adding that they protect against the wicked elements of the world.

He called for more emphasis on spiritual and less on material things. Nine new ministers were received into the sect Sunday morning by water baptism.

Key 73 Emphasis Felt

Lent Services Widely Varied

By DON GAIN
Colonist Church Editor

While Victoria's Roman Catholic and Anglican churches are observing Lent in traditional fashion, others are into the second phase of Key 73, the year-long campaign of "calling our continent to Christ."

The Salvation Army has planned a dramatic presentation of sermons in costume based on characters connected with the Crucifixion.

The second phase of Key 73 is highlighted by the distribution and study of the books of Luke and The Acts, published by the Canadian Bible Society under the title Touched by The Fire.

Bible Study

At Centennial United Church, former pastor Rev. Dr. Samuel Parsons is holding Bible study classes at 10:30 a.m. Thursdays, and at 7:30 p.m. every other Sunday.

He will take the pulpit this Sunday in the holiday absence of the minister, Rev. John Travis, and will preach on Key 73 at the 11 a.m. service.

At many churches the penitential character of Lent is being stressed. Metropolitan United held a congregational austerity supper Friday in connection with the program Ten Days For World Development sponsored by five major Canadian denominations.

St. Matthew's

At St. John's Anglican Church, a series of special services are being held at 8 p.m. Wednesdays. For the first three Sundays in Lent, John Albert Hall lecturer Canon Thomas Bailey will preach expository sermons on difficult passages from St. Matthew's gospel.

The Wednesday series starts next week with Rev. Peter Switzer talking about the sacraments with special emphasis for young people.

The speakers on following Wednesdays will be Rev. Kenneth Moss, lecturer in chemistry at the University of Victoria, speaking on The Church and the Scientist; James McPherrin, lay administrator of the Diocese of British Columbia, on The Church and the Layman; Canon Brian Page, rector of St. Barnabas, on The Church and the Spiritual Life and Beal Thomas, organist and music director at Christ Church Cathedral on The Church and the Musician.

Churches Join

St. George's Anglican and Cadboro Bay United Churches are working together in Christ's Mission for Cadboro Bay which will lead up to an evangelical campaign in May led by Rev. Alan Cooper, provost of Bradford, England.

From now until Easter each of the churches is holding meetings for Bible study. At St. George's the theme is Seeing Christ Through His Parables. At Cadboro Bay United the theme is taken from Touched By The Fire.

Study Groups

Canon Charles Bishop, rector of St. George's and Rev. Bob McLaren of Cadboro Bay United, both have issued invitations to people of all denominations to attend the study groups.

They will meet at 2:30 p.m. each Sunday at St. George's. Lay people will introduce a parable and it will be the basis of the discussion. Time of the United Church meetings will be announced.

The Salvation Army's Lenten Sunday Evenings at the Citadel begin at 7 p.m. Sunday. Maj. and Mrs. Don McMillan will portray the personalities surrounding the Cross.

Dressed in closely authentic costumes they will preach in the first person in a unique method of proclaiming the gospel.

This Sunday the high priest Joseph Caiaphas will be portrayed by McMillan. Other personalities in the seven-week series will include Pontius Pilate, Simon Peter, Judas Iscariot, the repentant thief, the Roman Centurion, Claudia (Pilate's wife), and Simon of Cyrene.

Study Lessons

The regular Wednesday evening meetings at Victoria Truth Centre this month will be devoted to a continuation of the study of certain books of the Bible and the significant lessons for living they contain.

Churchmen Plead For Aid to Poor

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must join the poor at home and abroad in the struggle for a just share of the world's resources and power even if it means cutting our standard of living, say Canada's leading churchmen.

In a brief to be presented to cabinet ministers, they say closing the gap between the world's rich and poor, primarily a moral problem, has become "a practical necessity for the survival of our common humanity on this planet."

Led by Archbishop E. W. Scott, primate of the Anglican Church, the group includes: N. B. McLeod, moderator of the United Church; Bishop W. Power, president of the Canadian Catholic Conference: M. Putnam, moderator of the Presbyterian Church; Donald MacDonald, secretary of the Presbyterian Church; and John Zimmerman, president of the Lutheran Church in Canada.

Their brief, launching a nationwide campaign called 10 days for world development, chief goal of development had been industrial growth.

But domestically and in the was prepared for External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

It says "the poor of the world, including the poor in Canada, are justly outraged by the widening gap that persists between those who have and those who have not."

In Canada and abroad, the poor countries, that growth had helped only the rich.

In the case of international development, trade, investment and foreign aid "create, maintain and extend the development gap between rich and poor throughout the world."

The brief says the planet can support its population — if the rich limit their consumption and the poor get their share.

The church leaders are to fly to Quebec City today for a meeting with provincial government leaders, and to Vancouver for the rest of the weekend.

They will continue their campaign with appearances in Calgary, Edmonton, Toronto, London, Ont., and Halifax during the next 10 days.

The brief says poor countries suffer falling export profits for their agricultural goods, capital losses from foreign investment and growing debts from foreign aid loans.

It calls on Canada to "start paying fair prices" for such goods as coffee, cocoa, rice and sugar, and provide trade preferences for poor countries' goods.

It asks whether Canada is ready "to place less emphasis on maximizing profits in our foreign investments and more emphasis on developing viable economic institutions" to serve the needs of poor countries.

And it calls for increases in the amount and quality of foreign aid, partly through removal of rules that tie aid to purchases in Canada.

Such policies will require major changes in the Canadian economy and society, the brief says.

"What would happen to the economy if affluent Canadians adopted a more modest way of living?"

"How many relatively affluent Canadians are prepared to level off or even cut down on their living standards?"

Strike Could Force More Reruns

TV Writers, Studios Deadlocked

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movie and television writers, who went on strike Tuesday, say they are making some progress with independent producers but are not even talking with the major studios and the biggest producers organization.

"We are having worthwhile talks with a good many independents," said Michael Franklin, executive director of the Writers Guild of America West, Thursday.

The guild is negotiating with independent producers responsible for The Streets of San Francisco, Barnaby Jones, The FBI, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, The Waltons and The Dick Van Dyke show, he said.

But no talks are taking place with the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers, the umbrella organization that covers most of the studios and producers who turn out the bulk of movie and television production.

The writers are demanding an increase in the minimum wage for a one-hour TV drama script from $4,500 to $12,000, and increased control over the writing activities of actors, directors and others.

The writers say they are willing to hold out for six months to a year, and that could cut into the production of next season's television shows, forcing the networks to rely on reruns.

Doctor Testifies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Tucson pathologist hired to independently examine the body of actress Sarah Miles' business manager said Thursday he "essentially agreed" that David Whiting died of drug poisoning.

Dr. Louis Hirsch said he was retained for the examination by Whiting's mother, Louise Cambell.

Whiting was with Miss Miles for the filming of the movie The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing when he was found dead Feb. 11 in a motel room registered to Miss Miles.

Justice of the Peace Mulford Winsor said the inquest into Whiting's death will reconvene at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. Winsor said he expects actor Burt Reynolds and Miss Miles to testify.

Rock Veteran Found Dead

CORTE MADERA, Calif. (AP) — The death of Ron McKernan, the 27-year-old "Pig Pen" of the Grateful Dead rock music group, probably was due to natural causes, a coroner said Friday.

McKernan's body was found Thursday night in his apartment here.

"An autopsy was performed, but the results are inconclusive at present," said William Thomas, Marin County coroner's deputy.

"The cause of death appeared to be natural causes. He had a history of severe liver disease."

An original member of the San Francisco band, founded in 1965, McKernan played and sang vocals. His illness prevented him from playing with the group in recent months.

His body was found on the floor of his bedroom by a neighbor who had not seen him for two days, the Marin County coroner's office said.

Friends said McKernan suffered from hepatitis, an illness contracted some time ago and more severe in recent months.

McKernan played the organ and harp and was a vocalist.

Drug Cultist In Okanagan?

Government officials will look into the purchase of 320 acres of ranchland in the north Okanagan area by a man alleged to be a follower of Timothy Leary's drug cult.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke told North Okanagan MLA Pat Jordan Friday that he would speak to Premier Barrett about the problem, and would have officials look into the reports that the land has been bought by Carleton Andre Youngstrom II, formerly of California.

Youngstrom is named by some U.S. police and narcotics agencies as a member of the Brotherhood of Eternal Love, a cult started by Leary who is known as the guru of hallucinogenic drug users.

Mrs. Jordan, a Social Crediter, expressed extreme concern about Youngstrom's purchase of land in B.C., and urged the government to declare the sale of land to Youngstrom null and void.

If there wasn't any way this could be done under present legislation, the premier should introduce on Monday a special bill to allow the province to declare the one sale void, she said.

Then the Legislature should suspend its normal rules so the bill could receive three readings and final passage all on Monday, and the whole problem would be cleared up by then, she said.

"I have nothing against the man personally," said Mrs. Jordan. "I think he should get the money he paid for the land back, and the seller should be compensated too.

"But with the increasing drug problem we have in B.C., I just don't think we should let people like that buy land in the province."

The land is about 60 miles east of Vernon on the banks of the Shuswap River. Youngstrom was reported as saying he was going to raise horses on it.

It is possible Youngstrom won't be allowed into Canada by immigration authorities, said Mrs. Jordan, because he has a criminal conviction — a record of marijuana possession in 1968 for which he served three months in jail and was on probation for three years.

"But I don't think it's good enough just to say 'Well, let's not worry about it because maybe the federal government won't let him in,'" said Jordan. "Even if they say he can't, I still don't think he ought to be owning land in our province, especially not farmland."

Already there were a number of communes in the north Okanagan area, she said, one Maoist and one believed associated with Leary's brotherhood. Residents were very concerned about this, she said.

"It's a simple matter of justice for the people of B.C." that no more people associated with such drug cults be allowed to buy land here, she concluded.

In the Legislature

Addict Centres Advocated For Province

Immediate steps should be taken by the provincial government to set up detoxification centres for alcoholics and drug addicts, Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) told the Legislature Friday.

Lauk was sharply critical of suggestions earlier this week by Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) and Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) that the way to deal with the rising heroin problem in B.C. was to clamp down harder on the trafficker.

A lawyer, Lauk said he had found that the big traffickers, those who weren't addicts themselves were "psychopaths. They don't fear death and they traffic in death."

"Believe me, if I thought the firing squad (as suggested by Phillips) would do any good, I'd pull the trigger myself, but it won't."

Neither would McGeer's plan of isolating all the addicts on a drug-free island, said Lauk, because it wasn't the addicts who spread the disease of addiction.

Rather it was the novice drug-user who still got a thrill out of drug use that told his friends about it and encouraged others to shoot up, he said.

"The addicts know that they're living part of a living death and do not talk about their addiction to novices" or to anyone except other addicts.

So if all the confirmed addicts were locked up, a whole new group would soon develop because addiction would be spread through the novices.

New approaches were needed because "the insidious disease is reaching its ugly fingers everywhere" in the province, and addiction was "walking the streets along with the general moral decay."

He was critical of the approaches taken by the B.C. Narcotic Addiction Foundation, which he said had engaged mainly in "experimentation in drug substitution," such as methadone treatment.

He thought it would be better to provide carefully controlled doses of heroin legally to confirmed addicts than to further engage in substitute programs.

Detoxification centres were an immediate need, he said, and should be staffed by teams of medical-social professionals.

He also urged a public information program, concentrating not on the negative dangers of drugs, but promoting "a positive life style," involving such things as skiing, chess and political participation.

Hotel Vermin Bring Fines

VANCOUVER (CP) — It costs money to have vermin in a hotel. Judge Arthur Beirnes levied a $100 fine against a Vancouver hotel owner for failing to keep the hotel premises "thoroughly clean and wholesome," and $100 for failing to keep the premises free of vermin.

Cocke Denies 'Superboard' Charge

A Social Credit MLA suggested in the Legislature Friday the B.C. government wants eventually to abolish local hospital boards and centralize authority in Victoria.

Robert McClelland (SC—Langley) said the boards are "another area of voluntary service into which the government would like to get its finger."

He also claimed Health Minister Dennis Cocke's promise to democratize hospital boards means in effect: "Let's get more socialists on the boards."

He quoted a B.C. Hospital Employees Union brief to Cocke last fall which called for abolition of the boards, claiming they were only "marginally effective' and an obstacle to efficient decision-making.

McClelland said this was consistent "with keeping the thumbscrews on from Victoria," and asked Cocke if he wanted "a superboard" directed by the provincial government.

Another Social Crediter, James Chabot (SC—Columbia River), interjected: "Forget the $10,000 they (the union) gave you in the last campaign."

The minister replied angrily that the government had no intention of abolishing hospital boards and said he was "tired of all the phoniness" in opposition charges that the NDP plans a socialist takeover of everything in B.C.

"We want the majority of board members to represent the patients. Is that so bad?"

He castigated the Social Credit opposition for being hypocritical in attacking the NDP government on the issue. He said several years ago the Social Credit government set up the Coquitlam, hospital board with half of its members appointed by the health department.

"We do want to bring health care to the community," said Cocke. "How many times do I have to stand in the house and say this is what we want to do."

The elimination of hospital boards would be "counter-productive," the minister said. "I do not favor elimination of hospital boards. Period."

Durable—is the only word for British Leyland's Land-Rover and their Austin Marina. Rust-proofing and undercoating are standard procedures for the latest Austin, which also comes with a special 7-point Cold Climate Package that beats the others cold.

British Leyland's Austin Marina has the same 1800 cc. engine as British Leyland's MGB. And they both have front power disc brakes as standard.

British Leyland's Jaguar is a superb example of timeless styling. They designed the Austin Marina along the same lines.

Built into every Austin Marina are the same kinds of economy and dependability that have made the Austin Mini the choice of over 3 million people who have better things to spend their money on than gas and repairs. Another thing that always impresses people in the Austin Mini is its large interior—especially considering its small exterior. Of course, the new Austin Marina is built that much bigger outside and inside. In fact, the Austin Marina's front and rear seats are wider than most.

Durability. Performance. Styling. Economy. Spaciousness. These qualities, coupled with a low initial price tag are what you look for in a small car today. And these are the qualities Austin has built into Marina. The Marina is not simply the best Austin ever but, quality for quality, feature for feature, very probably the finest car of its type currently being built.

The Austin Marina is available in three models: 2-door Deluxe Coupe and 4-door Super Deluxe Sedan (both available with Borg-Warner automatic transmission) and 2-door GT. The Austin Marina is backed by five Canadian parts depots and a coast-to-coast dealer network.

Fede... Aid ...

One of the worst failures of the federal Liberal government has been its unwillingness to provide money for medical research, former provincial Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer said Friday.

McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) termed Ottawa's record in this area as "shameful," saying that its contribution to medical research ($40.1 million) was less than half of what it should be.

And while government spending in general had been greatly increasing, the spending in general had been increasing only a very small amount or actually decreasing, he said.

The result, he told the Legislature, was that Canada "hasn't been pulling her weight as a nation" in the medical field. He noted that the U.S. gives about $5 a year per citizen for medical research while Canada's contribution isn't even $2 per capita a year.

He urged the provincial health department to start giving money to research to make up for Ottawa's failure on the matter.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said he agreed with McGeer's point of view but didn't really feel that the province should get into what is basically a federal field.

Cocke also told the house that a "very careful study" would be made to see what best use could be made of Veterans' Hospital, Victoria and Shaughnessey Hospital, Vancouver, if and when the provincial government finally takes them over from the federal government.

One possibility was that they might serve as centres for intermediate hospital care in the two cities, he said, but he noted they did have good acute-care facilities which shouldn't go to waste.

Federal Medical Aid 'Shameful'

In the Legislature

One of the worst failures of the federal Liberal government has been its unwillingness to provide money for medical research, former provincial Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer said Friday.

McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) termed Ottawa's record in this area as "shameful," saying that its contribution to medical research ($40.1 million) was less than half of what it should be.

And while government spending in general had been greatly increasing, the spending in general had been increasing only a very small amount or actually decreasing, he said.

The result, he told the Legislature, was that Canada "hasn't been pulling her weight as a nation" in the medical field. He noted that the U.S. gives about $5 a year per citizen for medical research while Canada's contribution isn't even $2 per capita a year.

He urged the provincial health department to start giving money to research to make up for Ottawa's failure on the matter.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said he agreed with McGeer's point of view but didn't really feel that the province should get into what is basically a federal field.

Cocke also told the house that a "very careful study" would be made to see what best use could be made of Veterans' Hospital, Victoria, and Shaughnessey Hospital, Vancouver, if and when the provincial government finally takes them over from the federal government.

One possibility was that they might serve as centres for intermediate hospital care in the two cities, he said, but he noted they did have good acute-care facilities which shouldn't go to waste.

Speaking in Cocke's estimates, McGeer urged the minister to become "a crusader" for the fluoridation of water in B.C. The province was tenth in the Canadian provinces as far as fluoridation went, he said, but fluoridation was very necessary to help dental health.

Cocke replied that it was necessary to educate the public about the values of fluoridation before bringing it in. A report being prepared for the government on dental care and preventive dental care would soon be made available to all MLAs, he said.

Cocke also liked a suggestion of McGeer's that prescription drugs over a certain amount per year be provided free through Medicare.

But the problems of excessively high drug prices would have to be solved as well, he said. The price of prescription drugs now was "absolutely intolerable," he said, and the government objected to the amount of "unearned profit right across the board" made by drug suppliers.

He said the four western provinces' health departments were studying the possibility of bulk buying of drugs, perhaps from overseas markets, which might allow the B.C. government to take up McGeer's suggestion.

Border Drug Pipeline Corked

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Three police departments operating on both sides of the international border moved at dawn Friday against what they consider a major pipeline for heroin and amphetamines from Canada to the U.S.

The Niagara Regional Police combined with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to make 10 arrests on the Canadian side of the border while sheriff's deputies made a similar sweep on the U.S. side.

A spokesman for the RCMP said a six-month investigation by the three departments culminated in the arrests. He said the investigation revealed that "large amounts" of heroin and the drug known as speed were entering the U.S. from Niagara Peninsula points.

He said no large amounts of drugs were recovered during the early-morning raids but police were hopeful that the drug pipeline had been sealed, at least temporarily.

Police said Frederick Cadedu, 22, of St. Catharines and Raymond Colbourne of Niagara Falls were charged under the Narcotic Control Act for trafficking in a substance believed to be heroin.

Eight others were charged under the Food and Drug Act with trafficking in amphetamines.

The RCMP spokesman said some warrants for arrests on the Canadian side are outstanding but declined to indicate how many.

Canada Sends Team to Cuba

HAVANA (Reuter) — A delegation from Canada's external affairs department will hold meetings with various Cuban officials. The delegation, led by Klaus Goldschlag, director-general, bureau of Western Hemisphere affairs, will meet with Cuban foreign affairs, trade, commission for economic, scientific and technical co-operation and Havana university officials.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Friday's answer — 'Twas Dirk Bogarde who was born Derek Van Der Bogaerd in 1920 and the movie in which he portrayed composer-pianist Franz Liszt was Song Without End. It also was one of the few turkeys with Bogarde in the cast.

Today's question — Wendy Hiller said "Not bloody likely" in Pygmalion back around 1940 but Hollywood's verbal rules were not eased until a 1953 movie which used the words "virgin" and "mistress." Name this William Holden romanticomedy and its German-born producer. Answers Tuesday.

TERRIFIC VALUE!

Designed by Sam Maclure, one of the best architects of his time, built in 1917 for a wealthy client who spared no expense; this quality home has more charm, and certainly far better materials, than any modern home at higher prices. Just right for those who like to entertain and have a large family. Set on a beautifully landscaped treed, secluded acre, the huge drawing room has bay windows overlooking the garden and an Adams fireplace. The large dining room with fireplace will hold the largest suite. Roomy modern kitchen with adjoining sunny family room. Cosy den with fireplace. Bedrooms and bathrooms galore. Garden playhouse and pool. But words cannot describe the charm of design. All this for only $98,000. Good financing available. May I show it to you?

Hospitals Burn Linen As Strikes Continue

LONDON (UPI) — Thousands of trains were cancelled Friday in the aftermath of Thursday's nationwide rail strike, gasworkers threatened new disruptive action and non-medical hospital workers kept up their strike nationwide.

British rail reported chaos in many regions, with 2,000 trains cancelled in the southern region, only half of the eastern region's normal services ooperating, and only six out of 14 main line trains to the north running.

Hospitals in the northeast, faced by dangers of infection, began burning soiled linen Friday. A spokesman for West Cheshire Hospital at Chester said it destroyed $4,900 worth of sheets. The Liverpool Regional Hospital Board said other hospitals were doing the same.

Officials of the Rail Engineers' Union said their men will strike again Sunday and the possibility of further midweek strikes cannot by ruled out.

The Gas Corporation said there was hope that its new peace plan might bring an end to the work-to-rule and strike action by gas workers. But gas workers' leaders said if the unions reject the plan, the gasmen would step up their disruptive action.

Sangha Workers Win $1.25 Hourly Hike

Workers at Sangha Equipment Rentals, 760 Topaz, have won a contract settlement which will add $1.25 an hour to their wages in a one-year contract.

About 50 workers, members of Local 234, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, are involved.

Union representative Joe Simpson said the workers are presently getting $4.15 and $4.40 an hour and they will receive increases of 40 cents an hour retroactive to Jan. 1, 25 cents an hour on May 1, 15 cents on Sept. 1, and a final boost of 45 cents an hour effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Engineering Chronicle Studied

Vancouver Island's engineering heritage is to be recorded in a joint program of the federal Indian affairs and northern development department and the Engineering Institute of Canada.

A series of about 50 committees is being set up across Canada to investigate engineering feats worthy of commemoration. The committees will make recommendations to a joint central committee that will choose the works to be recorded.

"The government has agreed to supply the money. They are asking us to find the things and tell them," L. Austin Wright, who will head the committee for Vancouver Island, said Thursday.

"Any engineering work that has contributed to the growth of Canada will be eligible for consideration," Wright said. He said he hopes non-engineers familiar with their communities will get in touch with the committee.

One thing that would almost certainly qualify for record is Esquimalt's Graving Dock he said.

Stately Empress

Hotel To Stay

CP Hotels has no plans to close the Empress Hotel, D. W. Curtis, president and chief executive officer of the company, said Friday in Toronto.

The manager of the 60-year-old hotel resigned Thursday and said in Victoria that the stately Empress might one day close its doors unless there is provincial government and city assistance for a convention centre.

Curtis said in a statement:

"We have spent more than $5 million in recent years to renovate the Empress, making it a modern facility while preserving its unique charm and character.

"While there is always room for improvement in the revenues being generated by the Empress Hotel, the hotel has shown a profit and we expect it to make an important contribution to our hotel chain."

Louis Finamore, who resigned as hotel manager and vice-president of the mountain and Pacific region of CP Hotels, said the Empress is an old, inefficient hotel although it had made a small profit during his four-year stewardship.

Foes Snub Ulster's 100-1 Vote

AP, UPI

Final returns from Northern Ireland's referendum of union with Britain showed Friday that voters approved ties with Britain by a 100-to-1 margin, officials announced Friday. The vote was 591,820 for union with Britain to 6,463 against.

Both sides claimed victory. The Protestants, who outnumber Catholics by about 2 to 1 in Northern Ireland, had campaigned strongly for the pro-union vote. Catholic leaders had urged their followers to boycott the referendum, and they said the tiny number of anti-union votes indicated the boycott had been effective.

In London, police held three Irish girls and seven men under intensive questioning Friday night in connection with the terrorist bombings of cars in the heart of London. British intelligence men said one of the girls belonged to an Irish guerrilla group connected with Arab commandos.

Intelligence officers and Irish Republican Army sources identified two of the three girls as sisters: Dolores and Marianne Price, both of Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersontown district.

The girls, in their late teens or early 20s,

NDP 'Ready To Listen' As 2,000 Plan Protest

Land Act Fight Province-Wide

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Legislature Staff

More than 2,000 people, some of them farmers on tractors, are expected to congregate on the lawns of the legislative buildings next Thursday afternoon to protest the government's controversial land commission legislation.

At the same time simultaneous demonstrations will be held outside provincial government buildings throughout B.C.

The demonstrations are being co-ordinated by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture whose spokesmen announced plans for them Friday.

Federation manager Dick Stocks of Vancouver emphasized that the demonstrations were all to be completely peaceful and non-violent and it had contacted Public Works Minister William Hartley to ask for extra security on the day of the demonstrations.

"We're responsible citizens," Stocks told newsmen in Victoria. "The last thing we want to do is let this thing get out of hand."

He estimated that between 2,000 and 4,000 people would show up for the demonstration in Victoria with thousands more at the smaller demonstrations throughout B.C.

He himself "didn't see the point" of bringing tractors to the legislative buildings for the demonstration, but said the federation wouldn't object to farmers who did, provided the tractors were properly licensed and insured for highway travel.

During the demonstration Thursday, agriculture federation leaders will present to Premier Barrett amendments they feel should be made to the land bill.

Chief among them will be a request that the government must buy land which it designates as farmland "at fair market price" if the owner wants to sell it when the government designates it.

As the legislation now stands, the government is under no obligation to give any compensation to those whose land values may be adversely affected by a government designation as farmland, parkland or greenbelt land.

Stocks noted that the previous Social Credit adminis-

Opposition Told To Offer Ideas

By IAN STREET

Agriculture Minister David Stupich called in the Legislature Friday for MLAs from all parties suggest amendments to the controversial Land Commission Act to help save B.C.'s dwindling farmland and make farmers better off economically.

He made the appeal after Premier Barrett signalled the start of the debate on second reading of Bill 42 just over 35 minutes before the house adjourned for the weekend at 1 p.m. Friday.

Stupich said the government was prepared to listen to constructive suggestions from any quarter. But he added while his personal mail on the bil was running 692 to 952 against the bill, the government to date has received "precious little in the way of constructive suggestions" for its improvement.

To the opposition who frequently jeered the minister during his 35-minute speech, Stupich said: "I'm not asking your support for this bill. I'm not pleading with you. I'm inviting all members to bring forward their amendments. Surely they must believe in the objects of this bill; to save our farm land and make our farmers better off economically.

"We don't know a better way but we're listening."

There was no immediate indication when the debate would be continued next week, with opposition speakers replying to Stupich and presumably NDP backbenchers also getting into the debate. A major demonstration is being planned by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture for next Thursday.

Stupich, who later told reporters outside the house no definite amendments had been prepared yet, was critical in his speech of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture which asked time to consider the bill then told the government to "chuck it out" rather than offer constructive criticism.

(Federation manager Dick Stocks said following Stupich's speech Friday the federation will definitely offer some amendments when it meets the government next Thursday.)

But earlier, Stupich told the house one unidentified

Finance Cures Hopeful

PARIS (UPI) — Finance ministers from the west's wealthiest nations have made progress toward solving the new dollar crisis but decided Friday to hold another meeting next week, West German Minister Helmut Schmidt said.

"Chances for an international solution to the crisis are good," Schmidt told newsmen as Friday's conference session drew to a close.

It was decided, he said, to hold another meeting late next week, again in Paris.

Schmidt said the nine common market finance ministers will not take "any final decision" when they meet in Brussels Sunday, but will work on the Economic Community's own proposals to restore monetary order to exchange markets rocked by a new flood of speculation against the dollar.

Canadian Finance Minister John Turner told reporters after the meeting that all countries represented at the conference, including the United States, showed a great openness and were ready to reach a solution to the crisis.

Saanich Woman Slain, Police Question Girl, 17

By JON PERRY
Colonist Reporter

A 17-year-old Saanich girl was being questioned by Saanich police late Friday night in connection with the knife slaying of a 38-year-old woman.

The victim was identified as Mrs. Shirley Anderson, whose body was found by police in her home at the Lake Hill Corners housing development in the 4000-block Cedar Hill Crossroad shortly after 5:20 p.m.

A young woman was later seen by neighbors running barefoot along the pathway leading to the parking lot at Lake Hill Corners. She got into a small car and drove away at high speed. The pathway was spattered with blood.

Stan Yaxley, who lives next door to the Andersons said, he had talked to Mrs. Anderson as she was returning home at 5:10 p.m. "She seemed very happy," Yaxley said.

He said that he saw and heard nothing until the arrival of police who asked him whether he had seen anybody leaving the house. "What ever happened between 5:10 and 5:30. I just don't know," he said.

Yaxley said Mrs. Anderson and a daughter who lived with her were "pleasant jolly people," who would pay their neighbors a visit for the odd half-hour and "have tea and coffee. They seemed very nice."

Egan Belittles Canada Route

• Waterfowl, fish and seals threatened by spill. Page 3

WASHINGTON (CP) — Governor William Egan of Alaska maintains that if an oil pipeline is built over Canadian territory, Canada would grab most of the pipe capacity to ship its own oil to the detriment of Alaskan exports.

"It is certain that Canada will require a substantial part of the capacity of any trans-Canadian line for Canadian oil," Egan told the U.S. Senate interior committee Friday.

The committee is consider-ing legislation to remove legal roadblocks to the construction of an 800-mile trans-Alaskan line.

The pipeline, to tap the huge oil deposits of the northern Alaskan slopes, has been blocked by an appeals court decision that the U.S. government lacks sufficient authority to grant the necessary right of way. The government has launched an appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Environmental groups who oppose the line on the grounds that oil shipments from an Alaskan port might pollute the Canada-U.S. coastline have urged the alternative of a pipe through the northwestern Canadian interior.

Egan maintained that some Canadian officials have said

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state ecology department has fined a Canadian pipeline company $20,000 for a Jan. 10 spill that sent an estimate 250,000 gallons of crude oil over farmland near the Canada-United States border.

The department claimed that employees of Trans-Mountain Pipeline firm failed to operate properly control valves while making a crude oil transfer at refineries in Ferndale and Cherry Point.

The department also charged that the absence of emergency spill procedures "significantly increased" the amount of oil spilled.

SAIGON (Reuter) — Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin sharply criticized today Poland and Hungary, the two communist members of the Vietnam peace supervision body, for refusing to agree to an investigation that North Vietnam had set up missile sites at Khe Sanh, South Vietnam.

Gauvin's comments were the most tangible evidence yet of a communist-western split in the ICCS over the administration of the Vietnam ceasefire. Indonesia has been reported backing Canada in seeking to investigate the allegations.

Grits Must Do More To Survive

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Unless the Liberals stop governing by the divine right they've assumed for 50 years, they're going to die a quick natural death from lack of support," says federal New Democratic House leader Stanley Knowles.

The Liberals have done "a lot of things we demanded," he notes, "but not nearly enough. They'll have to do a lot more."

The minority Liberals with their 109 seats as against the Conservatives' 107, depend from day to day on the 31 New Democrats for life and power.

"By giving us this and allowing us that," goes on Stanley Knowles, "they're only buying time because they really haven't changed in their divine right of power thinking, and they haven't gives us enough."

So when will "natural death," as he calls it, occur?

"No prediction beyond a week is safe," he replies.

Last November after an NDP caucus in Toronto, related Knowles, "we served the Liberals with our demands, our price in terms of legislation, to keep them in power."

That price?

"Higher old age pensions, increases in veterans' allowances, the $100 income tax credit, better housing legislation, improved legislative controls on foreign ownership," he says, ticking off some of them.

"But they haven't given enough," he adds. "We demanded a pension increase to $150 for the elderly and they scrimped in with $100.

"We demanded the pensionable age be reduced and they didn't cut it.

"They're not going to be allowed to get away with that kind of thing.

"They've got to stop governing as if they were born to power and become immediately more responsive to our demands — which are the popular demands of the taxpaying public at large, the voters.

"And I think they'll do it — because they'll do anything to hang onto power — and if they don't, well, it'll be the end of them."

Knowles spoke like this Friday afternoon as he went back into the Commons to watch another week wind down in which the New Democrats had kept the Liberals alive.

Time to Slow Down

THE FACT THAT B.C. Agriculture Minister David Stupich has now agreed — under pressure by NDP backbenchers — to consider amendments to the Barrett government's provincial land commission act, indicates that at least someone at cabinet level is having second thoughts as to the advisability of pushing through the new law with undue haste.

The legislation as it now stands was largely drafted without consultation with or reference to other levels of government even though there is a strong possibility that both federal and municipal authorities may be affected.

This is not to say, however, that the basic intent of the act — to prevent the further erosion of farmland—is not laudable. The provincial government is to be congratulated for showing concern over this continuing problem. But when the concern is translated into action which may negate the rights of the individual Canadian citizen, it is time to reconsider.

Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has expressed the view that the legislation in question may violate the federal Bill of Rights and has called for a delay in its enactment until this question can be settled.

Though he did not specify the area of conflict, he undoubtedly was referring to subsection (a) of the first paragraph of the 1960 Canadian Bill of Rights which declares the "right of the individual to life, liberty, security of person and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law . . ."

It may be argued that the key to this is the interpretation of the phrase "due process of law" and that if the new draft land bill is passed "due process" has been followed and therefore the rights of the individual have not been abrogated.

However, interestingly enough, particularly in the light of the seeming disinterest shown by the present federal Minister of Justice Otto Lang, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau commented at length on just this particular matter when he was minister of justice in the 1960 Pearson government.

Here is, in essence, what he said at that time: The Canadian Bill of Rights declares the right of the individual to the enjoyment of property and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law. These words "are intended to guarantee the specific requirements of fair procedure."

He continues: "Section 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights provides that no law of Canada shall be deemed to deprive a person of the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice for the determination of his rights and obligations . . .

"This is a fundamental requirement which is already recognized in the public law of Canada. In a new constitutional bill of rights it might well be placed in association with the fundamental rights to life, liberty and property. This kind of guarantee is fundamental to the impartial administration of justice. The general requirements of a 'fair hearing' are well known."

Perhaps these words of the present prime minister coupled with the sage advice of Mr. Diefenbaker and the imprecations of the NDP backbenchers may be sufficient to persuade the Barrett government to slow down in its headlong rush to enact this ill-considered and dangerous law.

Local Transportation Tax

REATER VICTORIA TAXPAYERS may have much to lose in talks going on between the greater Vancouver Regional District and the municipal affairs department of the provincial government. The talks concern the financing of Lower Mainland public transportation. In the long term, they must also concern the financing of Capital Regional District public transportation, since it is impossible to imagine one method of cost-sharing on the mainland and another, more favorable or less favorable to the local ratepayers, on southern Vancouver Island.

The latest proposal from the government to the Greater Vancouver district is that 50 per cent of the annual deficit of the public transportation system should be paid by the province and the other half by the local ratepayers through an increase in property taxes. It has been estimated that in present circumstances the rise in the tax rates would be about two mills, or $2 for every $1,000 of taxable assessed value of property.

This offer reportedly was greeted with laughter by the directors of the mainland district, and with unanimous opposition, which is not surprising.

At one time the Social Credit government appeared ready to give the regions a better deal than this New Democratic proposal. It was understood to be willing to turn over the B.C. Hydro systems to the regions with annual subsidies equal to the losses sustained by Hydro in its final year of operating the buses, plus one-half of any additional losses in the future. True, the Social Credit government retreated last spring to a less co-operative position, offering to pay only one-half of the operating deficits of any future municipal or regional rapid transit systems. But better was expected from the new government.

The New Democrats seeking election made two promises with a bearing on this matter. One was that "only services to property will be paid from taxes on property." The other was that an NDP government would develop an extensive public transit system "in conjunction with citizen and local community groups, with the provincial government assuming the major financial responsibility."

Mr. Lorimer has said that counter-proposals are needed. The Victoria region should not be slow in responding.

By WALTER SCHWARZ from Rawalpindi

The cycle of callousness that keeps 80,000 Pakistani soldiers and 16,000 civilians in Indian camps and jails started on March 18, 1971. That was the day 19-year-old Ghazala Sartad last saw her husband, in East Pakistan.

Her plight sums up much of the story. She was brought to me here by a committee of Pakistani grass widows as part of a shrill publicity campaign. But she was in genuine tears before she had finished.

"We were in Chittagong," she said, "and we heard the Bengalis were coming to kill us. My husband is a major. He went to get help, leaving me with his best friend, a Bengali. When the mob came, they dragged me into the bushes and left me for half an hour. I was six months pregnant.

"They wanted to know where my husband was. My four children were put in a truck and then hurled to the ground. When I got back to the compound it was full of dead bodies."

Mrs. Sartad has not heard from her husband since that day, but a friend heard him last month during a broadcast by Pakistani prisoners of war on All-India Radio.

In the 14 months since the Indo-Pakistani war, the prisoners captured on the western front— 619 Indians and 542 Pakistanis — have been exchanged. President Bhutto of Pakistan achieved this in characteristic style by turning up at the camp in his helicopter and telling the Indians, "you are free. You can go home."

He later confided: "I have played my two of clubs. Now let's see what they do with their ace."

Since then 942 sick and wounded Pakistanis have come home from India. But the ace has not been played by the Indian government and the latest attempt to draw it was made by the students who stormed India House in London with toy pistols. Their efforts are carefully condemned here. "No terrorism is needed to spotlight this human problem," the Pakistani foreign ministry told me.

The year of stalemate has not affected Pakistanis only; 172,000 Bengali soldiers and civilians are stranded in Pakistan. The soldiers are kept in camps and forts on subsistence pay and not allowed out except under supervision. The Bengali civil servants camp in their houses, on $13 to $52 a month, their cars and furniture sold, their telephones cut.

"How can Bhutto complain about the Geneva Convention when he denies us the basic human right to go home?" said a former chief secretary. Less fortunate Bengalis, laid off from factories in Karachi, are fed in gruel kitchens and beg from door to door.

Meanwhile, the macabre deadlock remains tight. Bhutto will not recognize Bangladesh until Sheikh Mujib Rahman meets him (to talk about debts and liabilities) and India returns the prisoners. Mujib will not meet him until he recognizes Bangladesh. India will not give up the prisoners until Mujib agrees — in negotiations he will not attend until he is recognized. Bhutto will not release the Bengalis (his 10 of diamonds?) until he gets the prisoners back.

On this ex-British sub-continent, atrocities are bafflingly mixed up with old-world correctitude. "I gave Niazi (the Pakistan commander) my word of honor as a gentleman his chaps would be well looked after, and they damned well are," Field Marshal Manekshaw told me in Delhi the other day. He says that all the paraphernalia of European wars is there: gift parcels, daily broadcasts by prisoners to their families, regular mail, Red Cross visits; Radio Pakistan and the BBC news are put out on loudspeakers in the camps.

There have been ugly incidents at the prison camps in India. The Red Cross says at least two and perhaps three of six killed in one camp "seemed to be cases of cold-blooded murder rather than self-defence." When the Red Cross report was leaked, its senior representative in Delhi was sent out of India. Manekshaw said the report was "absolute rubbish."

The Red Cross says that after another escape attempt all officers in a camp were denied water for a day and forced to lie in the summer noonday sun for two hours. In another case, prisoners were spreadeagled in the sun on several days, and the commander told the Red Cross this was a "light punishment" for trying to escape.

The Red Cross has not been allowed into Camp 66 at Tehar jail in Delhi. According to Pakistan, returned prisoners say they had been interrogated there with electric shocks, had had finger nails pulled out and had been confined "with lunatics."

The Pakistani soldiers, and civilians who happened to be in Bangladesh, were first shipped to India for their own protection against the fury of the victorious Bengalis. Special incidents apart, General Tikka Khan, the Pakistani chief of staff, admits grudgingly that general conditions in the Indian camps range "from average to bad." The civilian prisoners include 1,600 babies, most of them born in captivity, and 6,000 children under 12. Manekshaw told me he sent in teachers and toys for them, but the sister of a major whose wife and five children are all in the camps said they had neither books nor teachers.

She wanted her name kept secret because she was trying to smuggle in vitamin pills for the children in her parcels of school books, towels and clothes. "The pills are forbidden because they are supposed to facilitate escape. The letters say the children's legs are weak from under-nourishment."

For the moment, New Delhi remains firm. "We fought a war over Bangladesh and can't regard the conflict as over until Bhutto recognizes Bangladesh," said a senior official. "We can't trust Bhutto with 80,000 of his best soldiers until his intentions are clear."

Meanwhile, Pakistan has drastically hardened its own line. Last November, Bhutto told me he was willing to exchange ambassadors with India, restore trade and hold a summit meeting even while the prisoners remained in India. Now the foreign minister, Aziz Ahmed, says: "We will not recognize Bangladesh, or take any step whatsoever with India, until the prisoners are back. We simply cannot trust anyone's word on this."

Pakistan's strongest argument is that the Geneva Convention, which Manekshaw had promised to observe when he appealed for a surrender, says categorically that prisoners must be returned "as soon as active hostilities have ceased."

Pakistani leaders are convinced India wants to use the prisoners as a lever for concessions over Kashmir as well as Bangladesh, and this has not yet been convincingly denied.

Cynics in Delhi and Rawalpindi say Bhutto is not as keen as he seems to get the prisoners back, because they would be difficult to absorb and would add to the critics of his role in the war. But Tikka Khan has promised to take them all back into the army, "Even if I have to demote some people or create new units."

Hopes now centre on the Bangladesh elections. There are strong rumors in Dacca, that, with the elections out of the way Mujib may give the names of the Pakistani soldiers he wants to put on trial — and give India permission to release the rest.

Pakistani spokesmen are pointing out that in Vietnam prisoners were exchanged days after the peace agreement. But priorities are different here. For all the Gandhian idealism in Delhi, the human factor in the conflict continues to get pushed into the background.

No Voice from B.C. In Key Committee

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

With Parliament given a qualified post-budget guarantee of indefinite survival by the New Democrats, the fate of the government's key economic legislation will be in the hands of an unusually high-powered Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

No government majority in the Commons means a minority position in the committee.

So if the Opposition is in the mood to harass, it can embarrass and even humiliate the government with obstruction, delay and endless questioning of Finance Minister John Turner when he comes before the committee.

By asking the right questions of the right witnesses — possibly loaded question of planted witnesses — individual committee members can shape and shade the form of hearing at which the public is supposed to have its say about the budget.

The committee, comprising eight Liberals, eight Conservatives, two New Democrats and one Social Credit MP, has the usual quota of lawyers, a doctor, a farmer, an assistant crown attorney, two insurance agents, an industrial executive, six businessmen, a construction worker, a pharmacist and a banker.

The committee is a representative mix of veteran and freshmen parliamentarians, of some real squares and a couple of mavericks.

Most of them are men of strong and firmly-held opinion, so the committee can be guaranteed to be anything but dull.

There are some interesting names among them, including:

Sinclair Stevens, freshman Toronto Conservative, prominent some years ago in the formation of British International Finance which founded the Bank of Western Canada and then dissolved in a dispute with its president, the former Bank of Canada Governor James Coyne.

Max Saltsman, New Democrat from Waterloo, a nine-year MP, former businessman, now university management science lecturer, a small "c" conservative at heart, violently anti-NDP-Waffle.

Barnett Danson, five-year Liberal MP, worked on former Finance Minister Benson's misbegotten tax "reform," pushed the idea of "Cashex" — a discount for cash instead of credit — former assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Paul Hellyer, Toronto Conservative, former Liberal defence and transport minister, responsible for unifying the armed forces in their "Jolly Green Jumpers," jamming it down the Pearson government's throat under threat of resignation.

★ ★ ★

Dr. James Gillies, another freshman Conservative from Toronto, former chairman of the Ontario Economic Council, ex-chairman of the faculty of administrative studies at York University, past director of several Canadian companies and consultant to corporations.

Walter Baker and Paul Dick, both lawyers and new Conservative MPs from Eastern Ontario.

Harold Danforth, 15-year Conservative veteran, farmer; Ross Whicher, Liberal, long a fixture in the provincial legislature before coming to Ottawa five years ago; Judd Buchanan, Liberal, insurance man; all from Western Ontario.

Dr. Gordon Ritchie, Conservative, David Orlikow, NDP, druggist; and Marcel Lambert, Conservative, lawyer, all from the Prairies.

Gaston Clermont, Liberal, businessman, 13-year MP; Joseph-Roland Comtois, Liberal, businessman, seven-year parliamentarian; Jacques Trudel, second-term Liberal, businessman, board of trader; Harold Herbert, Liberal, freshman, construction man, all from Quebec.

From British Columbia? Nobody.

'An Ominous Change' . . . — . . . New Drug Abuse Pattern

World Body Seeks Source Control

By MAX WILDE from Geneva

Drug abuse all over the world has assumed "epidemic proportions" during the last 12 months, according to reports submitted to the International Narcotics Control Board by national and regional authorities.

The report for 1972 prepared by its secretariat for consideration by the board at its meeting here on March 12 describes as "an ominous change," the recent tendency for abusive consumption to spread from single drugs to multi-drug abuse; "The toxic effect of a given drug may be and often is greatly enhanced by consumption together with another drug," it says. The problem is thus less easy to control because, in the situation now emerging, if the supply of a particular substance is curtailed, consumption merely assumes another form.

Another "disquieting feature" mentioned in the report is the reappearance of cocaine in the illicit market, particularly noticeable in Europe. This is an almost intractable problem because of the extensive coca bush cultivation in the Andean region of South America, especially in Bolivia and Peru. Coca leaf chewing is a traditional indulgence which has been practised for centuries in these regions.

It is a direct result of poverty and undernourishment (it deadens the pangs of hunger) and its elimination can hardly be looked for in advance of major economic and social reforms on a wide scale, which would also have to take account of periodic natural disasters, such as earthquakes and drought.

The report continues: "The debilitating, often demoralizing, effects of exessive coca leaf chewing, coupled with the fact that the practice is not infrequently associated with alcoholism, make it essential on broad humanitarian grounds alone that organized cultivation of the coca bush should be terminated as soon as possible."

The use of cocaine in medicine is fast disappearing, according to the report, and while the remaining legitimate use of coca leaves is as a flavoring agent for beverages, the amount required is but a tiny fraction of the total coca leaf crop.

The report notes that in Peru some measure of reform has been achieved in recent years and more is in prospect.

In Bolivia, it says, there has been none, although about 10 years ago a formal agreement was drawn up between the government of Bolivia and the board, on the reduction of coca cultivation and consumption "but a change of government caused this to lapse." A further mission to both Peru and Bolivia to study the current situation is now being sent by the board.

There is the same problem of curtailing the supply of opium and its derivatives by cutting down the opium poppy cultivation. But, in this case, the report notes that considerable progress is being made, especially in Turkey and Thailand. Turkey has decided to abolish opium cultivation entirely from the end of the 1972 crop year, which the report describes as a "major event."

But, the report warns, even if abolition of opium cultivation in Turkey becomes a reality: "There remains a possibility that Turkey may become in some degree a highway for illicit traffic. Already a substantial quantity of cannabis moves across the country into Europe, and when indigenous supplies of opium are exhausted it is possible that they may be replaced by opium, or more probably by crude morphine, derived from sources farther east.

In Thailand, a five-year crop replacement project, to which the UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control has contributed more than $2 million and the Thai government more than $5 million, in cash, kind and services, is well under way. In the highlands of northern Thailand, semi-nomadic tribes have for generations grown the opium poppy. Any sudden change in the agricultural pursuits of these people could cause severe hardship, so the main objective is to eliminate poppy cultivation gradually in favor of other cash crops and economic activities.

Numerous trials are already under way in the fields of highland crop and vegetable production as well as fruit and nut cultivation. Crops being studied include hill rice, maize, potatoes, kidney beans, peach, persimmon, chestnut, avocado, apricot, tea, coffee, medicinal herbs and Chinese and French mushrooms (but not of the hallucinogenic variety). There are also plans for the development of livestock, poultry and fishery, apiculture and sericulture, and forestry and watershed management.

The Thai project is also meant to serve as a model for other countries, especially neighboring Burma and Laos. However, neither country is as yet ready for such a project because of military operations and guerrilla activities. The Narcotics Control Board estimates that as much as 400 tons of opium is at present smuggled from the "Golden Triangle" area where Burma, Laos and Thailand meet.

Another problem region where opium production is rife is the northern sector of Pakistan together with certain districts of Afghanistan and of eastern Iran which the board feels can only be dealt with "collectively on a broadly-based international program of external assistance."

In Pakistan there is also, according to the report, substantial traffic in cannabis and cannabis resin, some of which comes from areas beyond its northern frontier, and all of which has more than average potency. There is also growing international concern about the smuggling of cannabis from Nepal into northern India, and through India into other countries. Approaches to the Napalese authorities have received no reply.

Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia and popular son of his country's first president, died 25 years ago today — in 1948 — in mysterious circumstances, two weeks after the communist seizure of power and after a purge had begun. His half-dressed body was found under a window of an apartment, but it never emerged whether it was suicide or murder. The communists had won 38 per cent of the popular vote in Czechoslovakia in May 1946, and were in complete control of the country by mid-1948.

PARIS (Reuter) — President Georges Pompidou decided Friday night to make a dramatic last-minute appeal to voters in Sunday's general-election second stage, and his prime minister said a left-wing victory would lead France to ruin.

Pompidou will broadcast today after the end of the official election campaign. The outcome of the poll for a new National Assembly promises to be close.

The results in almost 200 of the 431 seats at stake are likely to be decided by a few hundred votes.

The main objective for both the Gaullists and the Communist-Socialist front was to get the support of the three million voters who backed candidates from the moderate Reformers in the first round last Sunday.

The centrist bloc has split but most of the three million are expected to follow Jean Lecanuet in swinging behind the more reassuring government parties, or to abstain.

The other leader of the Reformers, Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, split the movement wide open Thursday night when he made anti-Gaullism his top priority, separating himself from Lecauet's insistence that anything would be better than a left-wing victory.

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Two huge chlorinators were flown in Friday to purify the resort area's drinking water, but health officials said it will be a day or two before tap water is safe for drinking, ice cubes and tooth brushing.

There was no panic in Miami Beach or in the neighboring communities of Surfside, Bal Harbour, Bay Harbor Island and Indian Creek Village, which together house 150,000 persons at this time of year.

Visitors and year-round residents complained over the uniced martinis and searched for stores that still had bottled water on their shelves. Most bottled water supplies were sold out.

The air force flew in the 1,750-pound chlorinators from Anniston, Ala., and they were immediately installed.

Church Heads Seek World Trade Equity

OTTAWA (CP) — Leading churchmen took their campaign for world development to the cabinet and the Commons Friday, calling for major trade concessions for poor countries along with population-control policies.

They were starting a 10-day cross-country tour aimed at convincing Canadians to close the gap between rich and poor both in Canada and abroad.

Their brief to cabinet ministers, presented to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie and Welfare Minister Marc Lalond stressed trade over aid as the means to redistribute the world's resources.

The urged the government to press for a better deal for poor countries in international monetary and trade conferences, aiming especially at raising prices paid for commodities such as sugar, coffee and cocoa.

Archbishop E. W. Scott, primate of the Anglican Church of Canada and spokesman for the group, told reporters, later that Canadians should agree to a "voluntary limitation" on the resources we consume in the interests of helping the poor.

The brief also said the world's population is squeezing the limits of its resources.

Archbishop Scott said all churches, including Roman Catholics, are agreed on the need for family planning. But the group was urging the principle, not specific methods.

Others presenting the brief were Bishop W. E. Power, president of the Canadian Catholic Conference; Donald MacDonald, administrative secretary of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; John Zimmerman, president of the Lutheran Council in Canada; and George M. Morrison, secretary of the general council of the United Church.

Rev. N. B. McLeod, moderator of the United Church, is to join the churchmen today.

But Power said the answer is not simply raising the living standards of the poor to that of affluent Candians.

Indians, Government Still Talking

Wounded Knee Impasse

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Talks aimed at convering an "agreement in principle" between the government and militant Indians into an end to the armed confrontation at Wounded Knee bogged down Friday, and an Indian leader said "some disagreements remain."

Clergymen, federal officials and lawyers representing the American Indian Movement (A.I.M.) conferred for nearly two hours in nearby Pine Ridge but apparently were deadlocked on some of what the government had termed earlier "certain critical procedural matters . . . yet to be resolved."

One lawyer for the Indians said they are objecting to the government sealing off Wounded Knee from reporters.

Among the Indians' demands is that the interior deparment agree to suspend the Oglala Sioux tribal constitution and council, thus removing from office the tribal president, an A.I.M. opponent.

Other key points appeared to be exactly how and when the 250 Indians would end their occupation and whether they would be immediately arresed.

A justice department official, Jack Hushen, was asked at nearby Pine Ridge whether arrests still were anticipated. "That's part of the negotiations," he said.

Hushen said 20 persons were taken into custody late Thursday and early Friday, bringing to 53 the total number of arrests since the takeover Feb. 27.

"At least half a dozen Metis from this province have come and gone there during the siege but only three are still there today," said Dr. Howard Adams, past president of the Metis Society of Saskatchewan, in an interview.

One of their purposes in being there is to experience what is involved in such a confrontation with white authorities in case such an incident occurs in Canada, said Adams.

"We have no plans for any such insurrection in Saskatchewan. But the native people feel that their situation in this province is not too far removed from that of their brothers at Wounded Knee."

Labor Attacks Wardair School

VANCOUVER (CP) — The labor movement on both sides of the Canada-United States border is taking steps to disrupt a Wardair training school which the B.C. Federation of Labor terms a "strikebreaking school"

Stewardesses employed by the Edmonton-based charter airline have been on strike since Jan. 12.

The company has already been forced to move the training school, which it denies is training strikebreakers, from the Vancouver area to a nightclub in Point Rogers, Wash.

Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said Friday the striking stewardesses, members of the Canadian Airline Flight Attendants Association, have received permission from U.S. authorities to picket the new training school.

In addition, Haynes said, the AFL-CIO state labor council in Washington is attempting to persuade the U.S. Immigration Service to refuse admission to anyone intending to attend the training school.

Tom Spalding, executive vice-president of Wardair, admitted Friday that the company is operating a training school at the Point Roberts nightclub, but denied it was a school for strikebreakers. He declined further comment.

Don't Water the Highballs

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Two huge chlorinators were flown in Friday to purify this resort area's drinking water, but health officials said it will be a day or two before tap water is safe for drinking, ice cubes and tooth brushing.

There was no panic in Miami Beach or in the neighboring communities of Surfside, Bal Harbour, Bay Harbor Island and Indian Creek Village, which together house 150,000 persons at this time of year.

The air force flew in the 1,750-pound chlorinators from Anniston, Ala., and they were immediately installed.

Assistant Dade County health director Richard Morgan said it would take "at least a day or two" to flush the system, making the water safe to drink.

Health director Milton Saslaw said Thursday that Miami Beach water contained too many bacteria to be fit for human consumption. He recommended that residents boil their water before drinking it.

Miami Beach officials said the county health authorities' charge was irresponsible. They said there is nothing wrong with the water.

"I think the economic harm done to this city was immense," said Mayor Chuck Hall. "It will take a long time to undo what never happened."

No Place for Tourists

The situation is so serious that tourists are being asked to cancel their visits, and government officials are considering transporting water by barge to some of the hardest hit areas.

Ponape, the wettest island in the United States — administered Trust Territory of the Pacific, normally has an annual average rainfall of 180 inches, or about 15 inches a month.

But in January less than two inches fell and February was not much better.

In Palau, the district administrator has declared a crisis situation, and is asking all tourists, businessmen and government officials to cancel visits.

The trust territory's transportation director was on Guam last week looking into possible assistance from the U.S. military to transport water by barge.

Broad Beans

I am never in any particular hurry to rush my vegetable seeds into the ground, for I have no ambition to have the earliest peas or the biggest cabbage in our neighborhood—just the best-tasting. And I have noticed that vegetables which are grown fast and without any setback from cold soil or chilling spring winds are always more succulent and flavorsome. Therefore, with most kinds, I wait until the ground is pleasantly warm to the touch.

There is one seed, though, which I bung into the ground as soon as the soil is dry enough to be worked: the broad bean.

One reason why it pays to give broad beans an early start is because this enables the plants to make their full growth before the hordes of blackfly arrive on the scene. This pest, whether you call it the bean aphid, black aphid, blackfly or dolphin, has a natural affinity with the succulent growing tip of the broad bean plant, where it gathers in its thousands.

These could be killed off by spraying, of course, but not before they have fouled the beans. Besides, I am not overly keen on spreading poison spray on food crops soon to be eaten.

An easy and effective way to control the ravages of the blackfly is simply to snip off the tips of the plants as soon as a good crop of the pods has been set and before the blackfly puts in an appearance. When he can't find any broad bean tips, the black aphid will move on to his next favorite foods—the young branch tips of wild cherry trees and the backs of the leaves of nasturtium plants.

The broad bean is a native of the Mediterranean and was well known to the early Egyptians, but in spite of this sub-tropical origin, the plant is remarkably hardy—much more so than any other member of the bean family. There is no need to worry over late spring frosts, and about the only danger in early sowing lies in a tendency for the big, meaty seeds to rot in cold, wet soil.

There are several ways to lessen this danger. One good stunt is to moisten the seeds and dust them with Spergon or similar seed dressing before sowing to protect them against the invasion of rot organisms in the soil.

Another way is to dry off the soil artificially before sowing by digging in some bone dry peat moss, which soaks up excess moisture like blotting paper.

A third method is to "chit" or presprout the seeds in a damp bath towel stored in a warmish place. As soon as the seeds start to sprout, they must go into the ground immediately. Any of these techniques, or any combination of them, will do the trick.

The Longpods and the Windsors are again divided into white-seeded and green-seeded types, and the Shortpods into dwarfs and talls. Shortpods are the earliest, Longpods the hardiest, and the Windsors have the best flavor, with the green-seeded kinds more tender and delicious than the whites.

Broad beans are not very popular in some families, and this is usually because the gardener insists on leaving the pods unpicked too long, whereupon the seeds become hard and unpalatable.

Pick your pods before they become too bulgy, while the green seeds are still tender and succulent. Don't overcook them, don't salt the water, and you'll find broad beans, with their distinctive nutty flavor, an altogether new taste sensation.

It's Also the Devil, Says MELVIN MADDOCKS

Boredom Is a Curse

A psychologist, noting the well-known, glassy-eyed boredom produced by habitual television-watching, went on to make the rather astonishing observation that being bored isn't necessarily bad. Much of life, he argued, is, in fact, boring, and children especially should be trained to expect this.

Readers tempted to sputter "Big bore yourself!" ought to make sure the yawning psychologist is their true target. Isn't he voicing what a lot of other people are thinking?

They may not discuss boredom so blatantly. But they pay their terrified respects by the ways they squirm to escape all their lives from the psychic country of the lotus-eaters.

One is no sooner born, presumably, than the bogey starts closing in. Parents must fill the crib with the most stimulating playthings — as if a human being would lapse into terminal boredom at nine months without all this psychedelic catnip.

At five, the child enters the school system, where teachers convinced that education ought to be ecstasy — but fearful that it is dull, dull, dull — frantically stir actual and metaphorical strawberry syrup into the actual and metaphorical milk.

Sixteen or 17 — or, gulp, 20 — years later the perennial student lands a job described as "challenging" and "exciting." It doesn't quite "fulfill" him. That is to say, it bores him silly. By now he is highly educated in his standards of boredom if nothing else.

So he gets married.

Then, on an infrequent trip to the barbershop, he picks up a magazine with the latest, inevitable article on marriage. Are Husbands and Wives Obsolete? — things of that sort.

He is told that the boredom of the nursery, the classroom, and the office are as nothing compared to the ennui of monogamy. Depending on whether the author is a radical or a liberal, the young married is given from two to seven years before total indifference sets in.

Well, so what? he asks bravely. Isn't there a whole anti-boredom industry working night an day to produce — what do you call it?—"entertainment"?

Alas, even the antidotes to boredom can be boring. The master anxiety of popular films, plays, and novels seems to be that their audience will walk out or nod off in about five minutes or five pages if — quick! — there isn't another whomp of the old violence or a nude scene.

At this point, the first law of boredom may be defined: The harder one works at avoiding boredom, the more likely one is to be bored.

If, on the other hand, the arts are more fine than popular, they are all too likely in their war against boredom to choose boredom as their subject, like the plays of Samuel Beckett, the films of Michelangelo Antonioni, and the anti-novels of Nathalie Sarraute.

Our young anti-boredom fighter runs for his life. But where? After a brief, panting fling at activism — which ends, of course, in "political apathy" — he sinks down defeated before that television set where we first met him.

Or so the psychologist's script dictates, supported by a silent, fearful myth in the hearts of many that most people, as Toreau put it, must lead lives of quiet desperation.

What an insult this whole scenario is to the resource of human curiosity! How utterly unacceptable its conclusions are!

Surely the supreme mistake is to accept boredom at all. As something to live with, like that psychologist. As something to panic from, in the fashion of the swinger. Or worst of all, as something to be proud of — a badge of elitism — in the spirit of the intellectual snob.

Boredom is a curse—a disastrous loss of appetite at the feast, a dulling of the heart, a glazing of the eyes, a shutting down of the psyche on the posibilities of life.

Earlier Christians had a word for it: accidie. Meaning, listlessness as an absolute — the opposite very of the state of grace.

A lot of analysts-of-the-modern have tried, in effect, to find the name — the characteristic guise — for Mephistopheles in their time. It might be hard to discover a likelier culprit than that drooping, really intolerable coincidence of lack of energy and lack of purpose: boredom.

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — The MGM hierarchy converged on Gila Bond, Ariz., to hush up the more gory details of the suicide of David Andrew Whiting, the manager of Sarah Miles. It's always interesting to watch a big studio in operation when a scandal is brewing on a movie location. The legal and publicity departments do masterful jobs.

The lawyers got a restraining order which blocked the appearance of Miss Miles, costar Burt Reynolds and Miss Jane Evans, governess for Miss Miles' son, from appearing at the inquest into Whiting's death, which police said was apparently from an overdose of drugs. (This order was subsequently overturned.)

Miss Miles and the virile Reynolds are co-starring in The Man Who Loves Cat Dancing down in the desolate desert location. In her statement to police, Miss Miles said that Whiting slapped her around after she had come from Reynolds' room at three a.m., demanding to know where she had been. Continuing her story to police, Miss Miles asked Miss Evans to call Reynolds. When Reynolds arrived, Whiting had gone so Sarah went back to Reynolds' room to spend the night. Next morning Sarah returned to her nearby motel room and found Whiting's body in the bathroom. There were blood stains found in Whiting's room, the maid's room and Miss Miles's rooms, which police said were apparently from a fall suffered by Whiting.

For Reynolds, the story can only do him worlds of good because it fits in with his sexy, virile image. He'll be a superstar. And for the wacky Miss Miles, it only makes her more colorful. She'll sell tickets from now on. You can't beat page one publicity. Businessmen, Educators Meet to Exchange Ideas

DUNCAN — Businessmen and educators from Victoria to Nanaimo will be meeting next week at Duncan to participate in a free exchange of ideas during a day-long conference to be sponsored by the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber has approached educators from school districts on the southern half of the island and leaders of the business community to participate in the conference, which will be held Wednesday at the Village Green Inn.

Chamber vice-president Allan Kerr announced the conference plans at the chamber's general meeting. Kerr asked all businessmen planning to attend to contact the chamber office.

"We are hoping for at least 30 to 35 businessmen to attend this conference." Kerr said. The chamber expects an equal number of educators will attend.

Tom Oldfield, secretary-manager of the chamber, said the general aim of the conference would be to discuss education.

"To limit or further define the aim of the conference would be to limit what we hope will be a free discussion of what assistance businessmen can offer educators, and the extent to which education is related to the 'work of the world,'" he said.

Highways Minister Robert Strachan will be the luncheon speaker with Jim Carter, principal of a Victoria area high school, speaking in the morning. Afternoon speaker will be Ted Stryon, public relations manager of MacMillan Bloedel, Nanaimo office. Registration for the conference will begin at 8:30.

Oldfield said the format of the conference will be to break up into workshops after the morning and afternoon speakers and to discuss the needs of education from business, and vice-versa.

"Hopefully the workshops will lead to some useful conclusions that will be of benefit to both businessmen and educators," said Oldfield.

The conference is sponsored by the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, and this year Duncan was chosen, along with Dawson Creek, as one of the two locations for the conference.

Annual Easter Fair Moved to Ladysmith

DUNCAN — It seems that the Duncan area has lost an important recreational facility — the curling rink on James Street.

Co-chairman of the Easter Arts Fair, Ruth Dickson said the location for this year's third annual fair had to be changed to the Ladysmith agricultural hall because the curling rink on James has been condemned by the North Cowichan building inspector.

The curling rink is privately owned but for many years it has housed the indoor exhibits of the Cowichan Fall Fair and last year the second annual Arts Fair was held there.

The curling rink was built about 25 years ago. The arts fair, sponsored by the Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council, will be held, April 26-29. News of the condemning of the old rink was completely unexpected and reached the arts council before the owners of the building, Mrs. Dickson said.

Competition in this year's fair will be open to all residents of the Cowichan Valley Regional District and the different categories include paintings in all media, sculptures, pottery, textiles and writing.

The list of judges this year will include: Windsor Utley of Salt Spring Island, Ian Garrioch of Malaspina College, David Anderson of Deep Cove and Nita Forrest of Victoria, paintings, graphics and water colors; John Charnetski of Malaspina College, pottery and sculptures; Christine Stewart of Duncan, textiles, and members of the Malaspina College English department, writings including fiction, non-fiction and poetry.

Noted Duncan artist G. Thornton Sharp, who recently held a successful exhibition at the Victoria Art Gallery, will have a small display of his work at the arts fair at Ladysmith. Another highlight of this year's show will be demonstration by artists and artisans.

Parksville Plans Cleanup Week

PARKSVILLE — Village council has approved a "Cleanup Week" between March 18-24 and it is hoped that residents and members of the business community will co-operate in this project.

The move was proposed by Alderman Bill Roberts, sanitation committee chairman, who further recommended that the sum of $300 be approved to involve school students in the cleanup.

Roberts outlined a proposal to make a grant of $250 to a group of students who are raising funds for an exchange trip to Quebec if they carry out a general cleanup in the commercial part of the village. He also recommended that $50 be set aside as prize money for an essay contest for students on the subject "Why I should Keep My Village Clean." All these proposals were unanimously endorsed by the council.

Roberts presented the recreation commission's proposed budget for 1973 showing a total of $3,040 compared to $2,675 for 1972. It was explained that it had been decided to increase swimming class instructors this year to one head instructor and two assistants instead of one as last year and this will increase costs in that area. Council approved the budget.

Municipal clerk W. J. Cuthbert reported that the sale of motor vehicle license plates had risen to a new high of $80,612 for January and February, 1973. This is $11,797 higher than the same period in 1972.

In regard to sewage disposal in the Parksville-Qualicum district, a letter was received from the Regional District suggesting a further meeting with the two councils and engineers. This is to be arranged later this month.

Municipalities' Borrowing Area Broadened

Municipalities and regional districts will be able to borrow for a wider range of projects and improvements under amendments to the Municipal Finance Authority Act introduced Friday by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer.

All capital improvements now may be financed through the authority, a central agency which insures collective borrowings by its member municipalities. Previously, only water, sewer and pollution control projects were covered.

Definition of authority members is also broadened to include the city of Vancouver, which operates under its own provincial charter, the water districts of Campbell River, Nanaimo, Victoria and Vancouver, and the Sewerage and Drainage district of Vancouver.

Hugh Curtis (PC—Saanich and the Islands), who served as chairman of the authority ain its firset two years of operation after it began in 1970 and now is deputy chairman, said the amendments were a "positive and evolutionary" step in the development of the authority.

Lorimer said outside the house that municipaliies and regional districts are still free to finance their capital requirements on their own, although the authority "may be able to offer them a cheaper rate than they can get on their own."

Authority chairman Ron Andrews, who is mayor of North Vancouver District, said Friday:

"It (the expansion) is something that we have sought for some time. Granting us wider powers should result in savings to regional districts and municipalities through lower interest rates."

The authority has raised $44.9 million through five issues in its three-year existence.

"A year ago we contacted the regional districts about expanding our authority's financing into other areas and we received almost unanimous approval," Andrews said.

"The new powers are welcome and they will enable the authority to establish itself more firmly than ever in the borrowing market and it will also make funds available to local governments and lower cost," he added.

A request to the previous government to grant wider powers was refused. A new request to the new government was made late last year, an authority spokesman said.

The new powers, the chairman said, would also allow the authority to reconsider an earlier proposal to sell an over-the-counter issue at regional board offices, municipal halls and other outlets in B.C.

The proposal was tabled last year because it was felt that such an issue would be harmful to regional boards, municipalities and the authority because they would be competing in basically the same market. Regional districts and municipalities need not now go into the market on their own as that cost will be eliminated.

Firefighters' Wages Up

New Fire Laws In Effect For '73 Season

Tighter fire prevention regulations for industrial operations will be in effect in B.C. for the 1973 fire season, the B.C. Forest service announced Friday.

The new regulations will apply to all industrial operations near any forest, not just to actual logging operations.

All industrial operators will be required to have weather instruments necessary to determine the forest fire weather index each day during the fire season in keeping with forest service standards.

The new regulations also specify in detail the amount and types of fire-fighting equipment to be kept at all industrial operations. Industrial operations are defined as "any logging, lumbering, sawmilling, land clearing, engineering construction or industrial activity utilizing manpower or equipment."

In another new regulation, watchmen will be required to remain at work sites for at least two hours after operations have stopped for the day when the fire hazard is especially high.

In another announcement Friday, Ian Cameron, chief forester with the forest service, said men hired to fight forest fires now will receive at least $4 an hour without board, an increase from the previous $1.75 an hour with board.

The $4 hourly rate is for actual firefighters. Increased pay was also announced for other jobs in the firefighting force ranging from pump operators to cooks, mechanics and superintendents.

Cameron said the new rates are effective immediately although the fire season doesn't officially start until May 1.

He said the new rates "reflect a new philosophy ... whereby we can expect a good day's work."

Cameron said there were 1,903 forest fires reported in B.C. last year costing an estimated $2,288,000. A large percentage of that bill covered costs of water bombers, bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Firefighters wages were about 25 per cent of the total bill.

Port Busy

NANAIMO — Shipping remained at a good level through the port of Nanaimo during the month of February.

The monthly report shows a total of 46,407,645 board feet of lumber was exported through Nanaimo in the month. The major buyer was American east coast interests which will receive 38 million board feet, Japan 4.5 million board feet, continental Europe 1.6 million, Australia 1.2 million and about 67,000 board feet to Mediterranean ports.

In addition to the lumber, there were nearly 59,000 short tons of pulp exported, 100 squares of shingles, three tons of plywood and 2.4 million board feet of logs.

At a special ceremony at CFB Esquimalt at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Capt. Godfrey Hayes will assume command of the base from Commodore R. V. Henning who is retiring from the service.

The 53-year-old Hayes, currently chief of staff logistics, has served in several capacities earlier at Esquimalt.

After his Second World War service with the Royal Navy and Royal Canadian Navy, he was appointed to the reserve training staff at HMCS Malahat, Victoria's naval reserve division.

Later he was appointed to Vancouver's reserve division, and then was named training commander of the Canadian light cruiser HMCS Ontario, based at Esquimalt.

Strong Opposition by Ratepayers Forces Second Council Hearing

By KLAUS MUENTER And GORDON HAMILTON
Colonist Correspondents

NORTH COWICHAN — Bowing to pressure from angry residents crowding municipal hall Thursday night, Mayor Gerry Smith adjourned a ratepayers' meeting about 3 a.m. Friday, after six hours of haggling over a proposed controversial housing development for Maple Bay Road.

Smith promised the 300 people who jammed the hall that the hearing would reconvene at the earliest possible date to hear the remaining 24 briefs from residents. During the night, 15 briefs were heard, all reflecting strong opposition to the development planned by Kingsview Properties Ltd.

Too Small

Lawyers for the developers and the residents explained the ramifications of the "satellite-city" scheme at the outset of the public hearing which began 8:30 p.m. Thursday, in the large general office area of the municipal hall after the council chamber was found to be too small to hold the crowd.

Except for the developer's lawyer, Allan Walker from Vancouver, no one spoke in favor of the development which was described as a mini-city by the residents' legal advisor, Ian Stewart from Victoria. With few exceptions council followed a policy of complete silence, leaving 99 per cent of all questions from the floor unanswered.

Impressed

Nevertheless, after the meeting, at least one North Cowichan alderman said that he was very impressed by the briefs and the verbal statements from the ratepayers who showed "great sincerity, well thought-out preparations and a considerable knowledge."

It was repeatedly pointed out that the residents at large feel no animosity towards council but against the large development they fear will not only destroy forever the beauty of the Maple Bay Road area, but also will threaten the ecology and create ugly urban problems resulting in human tragedy.

Human Rights

One of the highlights of the hearing was a brilliant dissertation by law student Douglas MacAdams who represented his parents, brothers and himself. His presentation of his detailed brief that touched on many aspects of law, human rights and the responsibility of elected officials lasted for about one and three quarters hours.

His spell-binding address, reaching a very receptive audience, was interespersed with humor but carried the very clear message that council had no choice but to abandon its idea to agree to a "land use contract with Kingsview Properties Ltd.

He stressed that residents feel that North Cowichan does not need that development and that there is no cogent evidence "that we have to have so many houses on the mountainside."

He stressed that if council gives developers permission to go ahead that it could not refuse owners of adjoining large tracts of land to do the same.

Election Topic

He suggested that rather than having a bitter aftertaste — if council should approve the development—"why not delay it (land use contract) and make it a topic in the December (civic) election. Touching on the $50,000 security bond the developers would have to put up MacAdams explained it would be less than one per cent of the total investment. Directing his question at the developers in the room he asked: "What do you take us for — Hicks? Hillbillies?"

The ghost of Chief Tzouhalem, who lived on the mountain named after him, is returning to destroy the developers' bid to build a mini-city on the slopes of Mount Tzouhalem, Robert Stewart of Maple Bay suggested. He said the Indian chief, who had licence from the gods to kill, had returned in the form of the protesters, to kill the developers' scheme.

John Cowans, of Maple Bay, said he was concerned because the development would encourage a forced growth in the area. He called on council to draw up an overall planning development for the whole area, before it is too late and not to leave something as important as planning to the developers "who have only one interest."

Hidden Costs

He also pointed out there were vast numbers of hidden costs in the land use contract, such as fire, hospital, police, social services and schools, all of which would have to be borne by the municipality. Other speakers called the development " a plan for environmental degradation," "progress towards deterioration," and " a development where there can be shown no positive evidence for its need."

One old time resident summed up his feelings in one sentence. "This is a number one fast buck promotion deal, folks," he said and another one remarked "if the bylaw is passed after a public hearing like that then the public hearing is just a mockery."

Workers Walk Out In Somass

A company spokesman said the employees, members of the International Woodworkers of America, walked out after three mechanics at the Vancouver Island plant were suspended "for refusing to perform their normal duties."

MoT Will Replace Oil-Damaged Clothes

By JEAN SORENSEN
Colonist Correspondent

ALERT BAY — Ministry of Transport manager Bruce Waine said this week the oil-stained clothing of school children who helped with cleaning operations on the beach here will be replaced.

Complaints of oil-damaged clothing from parents arose after students volunteered to help the first day of the oil-spill and did not bother to go home and change school clothing.

Students were told to bring clothing to a representative employed by Clean Seas of Canada Ltd. for cleaning.

Waine said clothing that was deemed too spoiled by oil to clean would be replaced.

Mrs. Bob Williams said her children's clothing had been returned last week in the same plastic bags they had been sent away in. She said the clothing had been returned untouched.

She estimates clothing of her four boys who helped in the clean-up operation at $60. She said her children had been told the clothes were not worth cleaning.

Waine said the Clean Seas of Canada people had left the area and that MoT would now be handling complaints.

"But, there will be no cash payments," he said.

Waine said he will personally be reviewing the clothes and considering if a voucher would be given to the family of the child.

"I'm a parent and I know people can't afford to take a loss on their children's clothing, but on the other hand, we don't want to be had either," he said.

'Application Lost in Shuffle'

CHEMAINUS (CP) — Band chief Mrs. Rose James said this week that a $5 million recreational development planned by the Penelakut Indians of Kuper Island, on the east coast of Vancouver Island, is being delayed by federal and provincial governments.

Mrs. James said the band voted in favor of the proposal last month but the application papers to the federal government "got lost in Vancouver."

The plan calls for subdivision of 750 acres of the 1,800-acre island into 450 lots. Cottages would be built on each of the 1.66 acre lots.

The provincial government has made a 10-acre minimum requirements for subdivision of lots in the Gulf Islands and has objected to the development plans.

Mrs. James said the provincial government cannot enforce its subdivision requirements because Indian lands come under federal jurisdiction.

Foes Snub Ulster's 100-1 Vote

AP, UPI

Final returns from Northern Ireland's referendum of union with Britain showed Friday that voters approved ties with Britain by a 100-to-1 margin, officials announced Friday. The vote was 591,820 for union with Britain to 6,463 against.

Both sides claimed victory. The Protestants, who outnumber Catholics by about 2 to 1 in Northern Ireland, had campaigned strongly for the pro-union vote. Catholic leaders had urged their followers to boycott the referendum, and they said the tiny number of anti-union votes indicated the boycott had been effective.

In London, police held three Irish girls and seven men under intensive questioning Friday night in connection with the terrorist bombings of cars in the heart of London. British intelligence men said one of the girls belonged to an Irish guerrilla group connected with Arab commandos.

Intelligence officers and Irish Republican Army sources identified two of the three girls as sisters: Dolores and Marianne Price, both of Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersontown district.

The girls, in their late teens or early 20s,

NDP 'Ready To Listen' As 2,000 Plan Protest

Land Act Fight Province-Wide

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Legislature Staff

More than 2,000 people, some of them farmers on tractors, are expected to congregate on the lawns of the legislative buildings next Thursday afternoon to protest the government's controversial land commission legislation.

At the same time simultaneous demonstrations will be held outside provincial government buildings throughout B.C.

The demonstrations are being co-ordinated by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture whose spokesmen announced plans for them Friday.

Federation manager Dick Stocks of Vancouver emphasized that the demonstrations were all to be completely peaceful and non-violent and it had contacted Public Works Minister William Hartley to ask for extra security on the day of the demonstrations.

"We're responsible citizens," Stocks told newsmen in Victoria. "The last thing we want to do is let this thing get out of hand."

He estimated that between 2,000 and 4,000 people would show up for the demonstration in Victoria with thousands more at the smaller demonstrations throughout B.C.

He himself "didn't see the point" of bringing tractors to the legislative buildings for the demonstration, but said the federation wouldn't object to farmers who did, provided the tractors were properly licensed and insured for highway travel.

During the demonstration Thursday, agriculture federation leaders will present to Premier Barrett amendments they feel should be made to the land bill.

Chief among them will be a request that the government must buy land which it designates as farmland "at fair market price" if the owner wants to sell it when the government designates it.

As the legislation now stands, the government is under no obligation to give any compensation to those whose land values may be adversely affected by a government designation as farmland, parkland or greenbelt land.

Stocks noted that the previous Social Credit adminis-

Opposition Told To Offer Ideas

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Staff

Agriculture Minister David Stupich called in the Legislature Friday for MLAs from all parties suggest amendments to the controversial Land Commission Act to help save B.C.'s dwindling farmland and make farmers better off economically.

He made the appeal after Premier Barrett signalled the start of the debate on second reading of Bill 42 just over 35 minutes before the house adjourned for the weekend at 1 p.m. Friday.

Stupich said the government was prepared to listen to constructive suggestions from any quarter. But he added while his personal mail on the bil was running 692 to 952 against the bill, the government to date has received "precious little in the way of constructive suggestions" for its improvement.

To the opposition who frequently jeered the minister during his 35-minute speech, Stupich said: "I'm not asking your support for this bill. I'm not pleading with you. I'm inviting all members to bring forward their amendments. Surely they must believe in the objects of this bill; to save our farm land and make our farmers better off economically.

"We don't know a better way but we're listening."

There was no immediate indication when the debate would be continued next week, with opposition speakers replying to Stupich and presumably NDP backbenchers also getting into the debate. A major demonstration is being planned by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture for next Thursday.

Stupich, who later told reporters outside the house no definite amendments had been prepared yet, was critical in his speech of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture which asked time to consider the bill then told the government to "chuck it out" rather than offer constructive criticism.

(Federation manager Dick Stocks said following Stupich's speech Friday the federation will definitely offer some amendments when it meets the government next Thursday.)

But earlier, Stupich told the house one unidentified

Saanich Woman Slain, Police Question Girl, 17

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A 17-year-old Saanich girl was being questioned by Saanich police late Friday night in connection with the knife slaying of a 38-year-old woman.

● Picture on Page 9

The victim was identified as Mrs. Shirley Anderson, whose body was found by police in her home at the Lake Hill Corners housing development in the 4000-block Cedar Hill Crossroad shortly after 5:30 p.m.

A young woman was later seen by neighbors running barefoot along the pathway leading to the parking lot at Lake Hill Corners. She got into a small car and drove away at high speed. The pathway was spattered with blood.

Stan Yaxley, who lives next door to the Andersons, said he had talked to Mrs. Anderson as she was returning home at 5:10 p.m. "She seemed very happy," Yaxley said.

He said that he saw and heard nothing until the arrival of police who asked him whether he had seen anybody leaving the house. "What ever happened between 5:10 and 5:30? I just don't know," he said.

Yaxley said Mrs. Anderson and a daughter who lived with her were "pleasant jolly people," who would pay their neighbors a visit for the odd half-hour and "have tea and coffee. They seemed very nice."

Finance Cures Hopeful

PARIS (UPI) — Finance ministers from the west's wealthiest nations have made progress toward solving the new dollar crisis but decided Friday to hold another meeting next week, West German Minister Helmut Schmidt said.

"Chances for an international solution to the crisis are good," Schmidt told newsmen as Friday's conference session drew to a close.

It was decided, he said, to hold another meeting late next week, again in Paris.

Schmidt said the nine common market finance ministers will not take "any final decision" when they meet in Brussels Sunday, but will work on the Economic Community's own proposals to restore monetary order to exchange markets rocked by a new flood of speculation against the dollar.

Canadian Finance Minister John Turner told reporters after the meeting that all countries represented at the conference, including the United States, showed a great openness and were ready to reach a solution to the crisis.

Egan Belittles Canada Route

● Waterfowl, fish and seals threatened by spill. Page 3

WASHINGTON (CP) — Governor William Egan of Alaska maintains that if an oil pipeline is built over Canadian territory, Canada would grab most of the pipe capacity to ship its own oil to the detriment of Alaskan exports.

"It is certain that Canada will require a substantial part of the capacity of any trans-Canadian line for Canadian oil," Egan told the U.S. Senate interior committee Friday.

The committee is considering legislation to remove legal roadblocks to the construction of an 800-mile trans-Alaskan line.

The pipeline, to tap the huge oil deposits of the northern Alaskan slopes, has been blocked by an appeals court decision that the U.S. government lacks sufficient authority to grant the necessary right of way. The government has launched an appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Environmental groups who oppose the line on the grounds that oil shipments from an Alaskan port might pollute the Canada-U.S. coastline have urged the alternative of a pipe through the northwestern Canadian interior.

Egan maintained that some Canadian officials have said

$20,000 Fine For Spill

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state ecology department has fined a Canadian pipeline company $20,000 for a Jan. 10 spill that sent an estimate 250,000 gallons of crude oil over farmland near the Canada-United States border.

The department claimed that employees of Trans-Mountain Pipeline firm failed to operate properly control valves while making a crude oil transfer at refineries in Ferndale and Cherry Point.

The department also charged that the absence of emergency spill procedures "significantly increased" the amount of oil spilled.

Canada Raps Team Reds

SAIGON (Reuter) — Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin sharply criticized today Poland and Hungary, the two communist members of the Vietnam peace supervision body, for refusing to agree to an investigation that North Vietnam had set up missile sites at Khe Sanh, South Vietnam.

Gauvin's comments were the most tangible evidence yet of a communist-western split in the ICCS over the administration of the Vietnam ceasefire. Indonesia has been reported backing Canada in seeking to investigate the allegations.

Grits Must Do More To Survive

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Unless the Liberals stop governing by the divine right they've assumed for 50 years, they're going to die a quick natural death from lack of support," says federal New Democratic House leader Stanley Knowles.

The Liberals have done "a lot of things we demanded," he notes, "but not nearly enough. They'll have to do a lot more."

The minority Liberals with their 109 seats as against the Conservatives' 107, depend from day to day on the 31 New Democrats for life and power.

"By giving us this and allowing us that," goes on Stanley Knowles, "they're only buying time because they really haven't changed in their divine right of power thinking, and they haven't gives us enough."

So when will "natural death," as he calls it, occur?

"No prediction beyond a week is safe," he replies.

Last November after an NDP caucus in Toronto, related Knowles, "we served the Liberals with our demands, our price in terms of legislation, to keep them in power."

That price?

"Higher old age pensions, increases in veterans' allowances, the $100 income tax credit, better housing legislation, improved legislative controls on foreign ownership," he says, ticking off some of them.

"But they haven't given enough," he adds. "We demanded a pension increase to $150 for the elderly and they scrimped in with $100.

"We demanded the pensionable age be reduced and they didn't cut it.

"They're not going to be allowed to get away with that kind of thing.

"They've got to stop governing as if they were born to power and become immediately more responsive to our demands — which are the popular demands of the taxpaying public at large, the voters.

"And I think they'll do it because they'll do anything to hang onto power — and if they don't, well, it'll be the end of them."

Knowles spoke like this Friday afternoon as he went back into the Commons to watch another week wind down in which the New Democrats had kept the Liberals alive.

Hailed by Municipalities

Capital Loans Scope Widened

Municipalities and regional districts will be able to borrow for a wider range of projects and improvements under amendments to the Municipal Finance Authority Act introduced Friday by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer.

All capital improvements now may be financed through the authority, a central agency which insures collective borrowings by its member municipalities. Previously, only water, sewer and pollution control projects were covered.

Definition of authority members is also broadened to include the city of Vancouver, which operates under its own provincial charter, the water districts of Campbell River, Nanaimo, Victoria and Vancouver, and the Sewerage and Drainage district of Vancouver.

Curtis

Hugh Curtis (PC—Saanich and the Islands), who served as chairman of the authority in its first two years of operation after it began in 1970 and now is deputy chairman, said the amendments were a "positive and evolutionary" step in the development of the authority.

Lorimer said outside the house that municipalities and regional districts are still free to finance their capital requirements on their own, although the authority "may be able to offer them a cheaper rate than they can get on their own."

Authority chairman Ron Andrews, who is mayor of North Vancouver District, said Friday:

"It (the expansion) is something that we have sought for some time. Granting us wider powers should result in savings to regional districts and municipalities through lower interest rates."

The authority has raised $44.9 million through five issues in its three-year existence.

"A year ago we contacted the regional districts about expanding our authority's financing into other areas and we received almost unanimous approval," Andrews said.

"The new powers are welcome and they will enable the authority to establish itself more firmly than ever in the borrowing market and it will also make funds available to local governments and lower cost," he added.

A request to the previous government to grant wider powers was refused. A new request to the new government was made late last year, an authority spokesman said.

The new powers, the chairman said, would also allow the authority to reconsider an earlier proposal to sell an over-the-counter issue at regional board offices, municipal halls and other outlets in B.C.

The proposal was tabled last year because it was felt that such an issue would be harmful to regional boards, municipalities and the authority because they would be competing in basically the same market. Regional districts and municipalities need not now go into the market on their own as that cost will be eliminated.

High Speed Adventure Cost $1,100

A 25-year-old Saanich man will have to pay $1,100 for a wild car chase Friday morning in Colwood, Saanich and Victoria but—thanks to his wife and two small children—he won't be going to jail.

The driver, John Bertram Gabriel of 3061 Orillia, pleaded guilty Friday afternoon in Victoria Provincial Court to a three-count charge of criminally negligent driving, failing to remain at an accident scene and public mischief.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the chase began at 5:15 a.m. when Gabriel's car passed an RCMP vehicle in Colwood. It reached speeds of 85 to 90 miles an hour, involved a dozen police cars from three forces and covered 10 streets before it ended on Dunedin.

Gabriel abandoned the car there and escaped on foot after a short chase. During the road adventure, he hit a parked car on one street and forced a male pedestrian to "dive off the road" on another.

At 7:45 a.m., Gabriel phoned Victoria police to report his car had been stolen. Two policemen spent six hours in investigation until Gabriel admitted he had been driving and "took off because he had bee ndrinking."

Gabriel admitted a 1970 conviction for dangerous driving in the same area. On questioning by Judge William Ostler, he said he had a wife and two children, worked as a watchman on James Island and drove to work daily from his Saanich home.

The judge indicated he supported Macintyre's suggestion of a jail term but added "the people who will suffer" were Gabriel's family. He fined Gabriel $500 on the first count, $350 on the second and $250 on the third, said there would be a licence suspension and set payment of the fine at $75 a month.

Saanich Solves Straw Vote Puzzle

Electors Will Decide Trustee

Saanich school board has finally cleared up the mystery of the straw vote.

Electors of the school district will make their choice of a new trustee known March 31, a time when they will also vote on a regional hospital board capital improvement referendum.

The board has had trouble trying to fill a vacant trustee seat. No one qualified in last December's election and five persons came forward recently in answer to a board advertisement. Because of the situation the board asked the provincial education department for advice and was told to take a "straw vote."

Trustees, surprised by the term, sought clarification from the department. The wording in an initial reply failed to remove the puzzle.

Board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott said Friday the March 31 scheme really adds up to a "straw vote which can be interpreted as a plebiscite."

Mrs. Parrott

The 4,500 eligible voters will be asked to mark the name of the trustee candidate they favor when they are voting on the hospital referendum.

"What we will be doing is polling the people to see who they want to represent them," Mrs. Parrott said. "The name of the person they choose will be presented to Education Minister Eileen Dailly."

Because of the situation surrounding the vacancy the minister must give final approval of the replacement.

While Mrs. Dailly isn't bound by the vote, Mrs. Parrott has no doubt at all that she will abide by it.

The voters will have four definite choices, possibly a fifth. Those whose names will appear on the ballot are D. A. Grafton, 4923 Townsend; F. R. Machin, 985 Abbey; Margaret Protapappas, 4965 Lochside, and R. E. Tinney, 5060 Cordova Bay. A fifth person who looms as a possible candidate at the moment is S. G. Watson, 1670 Pear.

Command Change Marked Tuesday

At a special ceremony at CFB Esquimalt at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Capt. Godfrey Hayes will assume command of the base from Commodore R. V. Henning who is retiring from the service.

The 53-year-old Hayes, currently chief of staff logistics, has served in several capacities earlier at Esquimalt.

In September 1962 he commanded the Second Canadian Escort Squadron at Esquimalt until he joined the Canadian Join Staff in London, Eng. in 1964.

After his Second World War service with the Royal Navy and Royal Canadian Navy, he was appointed to the reserve training staff at HMCS Malahat, Victoria's naval reserve division.

Later he was appointed to Vancouver's reserve division, and then was named training commander of the Canadian light cruiser HMCS Ontario, based at Esquimalt.

Announcement of Hayes' appointment was made Friday by the defence department which also reported that the Esquimalt-based destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, which left here Jan. 29 for the South Pacific as part of Canada's truce contingent in Vietnam, will spend the weekend at Singapore.

The ship, commanded by Cmdr. L. A. Dzioba, will remain in port until Tuesday when it will take part in naval exercises with other Commonwealth forces.

The ship has been scheduled to remain in the South Pacific as standby support to Canadian forces serving on the international supervision commission.

A forces spokesman said Friday that no decision has been reached as to whether another ship will replace Terra Nova in its current role. Ottawa said earlier the ship would only remain in the South Pacific for a 60-day period.

No Deaths

Victoria and Saanich have won certificates of merit for no traffic fatalities during Safe Driving Week. These awards are made by the Canada Safety Council annually. This is the fifth successive award to Victoria and the fourth to Saanich.

Esquimalt Polls Open at 8 a.m.

Voting in the Esquimalt by-election today to fill the aldermanic vacancy left by the death of Ald. Art Cuthbert will take place in the municipal hall from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

City Urged Not To Start Own Ambulance Services

Service would be inferior and the cost prohibitive if Victoria were to provide ambulance services under the auspices of its fire department, according to L. B. Klein, research co-ordinator of the Victoria-based Canadian Ambulance Ad-Hoc Committee.

In a brief submitted Friday to Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of city council's health committee, Klein recommends that if the city is waiting until the provincial government brings in legislation that might place ambulance services under regional control, council should retain its present contract arrangement with a private ambulance firm.

The brief says if the city added ambulance service units to its fire department and cancelled its present contract with Garden City Ambulance, the taxpayers would be faced "with an outlandish expense."

This view is shared by Frampton who said earlier this week that the city's ambulance bill could jump to $120,000 a year if it were to provide an up-to-date, efficient ambulance service. That would be double the amount the city now pays to Garden City Ambulance.

Klein

The ambulance service question has been under review ever since Klein and his ad-hoc committee said last year that ambulance services were inadequate in most of the Greater Victoria municipalities.

In his brief, Klein says there are numerous examples which show that fire departments can't provide efficient ambulance services.

In most cases, he says, firemen lack proper training, while trained ambulance personnel can provide better and cheaper service.

"There are people in the province of B.C. who have received training far beyond the level of an A class industrial first-aid ticket. Some of these people are graduates of the 480-hour ambulance training course conducted by Metropolitan Ambulance Services of Vancouver," he says.

"Others are men who have spent several years in ambulance work and have taken in-hospital and advanced medical training in emergency medicine. These people are specialists in their field and could be employed at a considerably lower wage than a firefighter," Klein says.

For further information, Klein also gave Frampton a copy of a brief prepared by the Ambulance Employees Union for submission to Burnaby council.

That brief deals in detail with the question of providing a municipally-operated ambulance service for "emergency calls only."

That scheme, the brief says, has been tried by several Canadian cities and in each case, it failed.

There was a duplication of services which resulted in prohibitive costs. The only good thing the brief has to say about the municipal ambulance service is that it might respond a little faster to emergency calls than a private one.

Victoria council will have to decide what to do about ambulance service before June 30, when the city's present contract with Garden City Ambulance expires.

It has been estimated that the city would have to add as many as 12 men to its present firefighting force if the department takes over ambulance duties.

Industries Face New Fire Prevention Laws

Tighter fire prevention regulations for industrial operations will be in effect in B.C. for the 1973 fire season, the B.C. Forest service announced Friday.

The new regulations will apply to all industrial operations near any forest, not just to actual logging operations.

All industrial operators will be required to have weather instruments necessary to determine the forest fire weather index each day during the fire season in keeping with forest service standards.

The new regulations also specify in detail the amount and types of fire-fighting equipment to be kept at all industrial operations. Industrial operations are defined as "any logging, lumbering, sawmilling, land clearing, engineering construction or industrial activity utilizing manpower or equipment."

In another new regulation, watchmen will be required to remain at work sites for at least two hours after operations have stopped for the day when the fire hazard is especially high.

In another announcement Friday, Ian Cameron, chief forester with the forest service, said men hired to fight forest fires now will receive at least $4 an hour without board, an increase from the previous $1.75 an hour with board.

The $4 hourly rate is for actual firefighters. Increased pay was also announced for other jobs in the firefighting force ranging from pump operators to cooks, mechanics and superintendents.

Cameron said the new rates are effective immediately although the fire season doesn't officially start until May 1.

He said the new rates "reflect a new philosophy . . . whereby we can expect a good day's work."

Cameron said there were 1,903 forest fires reported in B.C. last year costing an estimated $2,288,000. A large percentage of that bill covered costs of water bombers, bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Firefighters wages were about 25 per cent of the total bill.

Janssen's Role: Private Eye

He started as private eye Richard Diamond, became The Fugitive, returned as treasury agent O'Hara and now David Janssen is trying for his fourth TV series — as a private eye. The pilot of Harry O will be seen at 9 p.m. Sunday on Channel 4 with Janssen as Harry Orwell, former policeman turned private eye who calls on the help of such as Los Angeles police chemist Will Geer.

THERE'S NEVER anything good on TV, they say. Tonight, ABC and Laurence Olivier will join for a three-hour performance of Eugene O'Neill's stunning autobiographical family tragedy Long Day's Journey Into Night, starting at 8 p.m. on Channel 4. Constance Cummings is the mother with Denis Quilley, right, as Jamie and Ronald Pickup as Edmund, who is really O'Neill himself.

TRUMAN CAPOTE probably didn't plan it that way but his book In Cold Blood seems to have made him an expert on prisons. The second of his ABC specials on San Quentin prison in California and its inmates and workers is scheduled at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 4 and indications are other similar programs will follow.

Latest TV News Camera Will Quicken Pace

It is already in use or scheduled for use in the news departments of the 10 CBS and NBC-owned TV stations in the U.S.

The camera, like news-film cameras, is carried by one man, and can be plugged into external power sources or run for two hours on a battery pack toted by the cameraman.

But that is where the similarity ends. The new camera can send live transmissions on a small microwave antenna carried on the cameraman's backpack.

The camera can also record events on videotape, reducing by as much as one half the time now needed to develop and edit the film currently used by TV news teams on most stories.

11:30 — ABC's Wide World of Entertainment brings back the funny Comedy News series with Bob and Ray, Mort Sahl, Dick Gregory, Joan Rivers, Richard Dawson and P.D.Q. Bach's mad son, Peter Schickele — 4.

Recognized Host

Vancouver has won a modicum of recognition from CBC headquarters in Toronto through the use of writer-broadcaster Helen Hutchinson as host of Arts 73., which started last Thursday at 10 p.m. on Channel 2. The weekly series will show what's doing in the arts of Canada.

Nobleman Dares Wed

Just about the only aspect of the CBC's Whiteoaks of Jalna disaster to catch public favor was the acting and personality of Paul Harding. He will return to the CBC at 9 p.m. Sunday on Channels 2 and 6 in the latest Purple Playhouse melodrama, with Patricia Collins, as a used-up nobleman who accepts a dare to marry the next woman he meets.

The Bait

The plot sounds familiar but ABC's movies of the week are always at least interesting. In The Bait, Donna Mills is an undercover policewoman who serves as a lure for the killer. With her in the cast are Michael Constantine, Arlene Golonka and June Lockhart and The Bait will be seen at 2:30 p.m. Sunday on Channels 6 and 8 and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 4.

Kenton Still Jazzing

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Stan Kenton, a warm, sophisticated, six-foot-five package of nervous energy, is still looking for new horizons.

Over the last two years Kenton, the nation's leader in progressive jazz for over 30 years, has made over 200 one-night concerts around the country. He's also taught high school and college students about jazz and made recordings.

Unlike most band leaders, Kenton, now 60, thrives on this hectic schedule.

"It gives me a chance to be free, to be my own man," he said.

Many big bands folded in the late '40s, but Kenton kept going, despite frequent changes in personnel. He kept assembling larger and more complex bands. He aimed for concerts, appealing to those who came to listen, rather than to dance.

More recently, he completed the first film on jazz to be used as an educational supplement in schools, titled The Substance of Jazz.

Kenton did much of the early arranging himself. Later, he was aided by Pete Rugulo, Shorty Rogers, Gerry Mulligan and Bill Holman.

Many current arrangements lean heavily on Latin rhythms. He plays Love Story in a style far different than the score in the movie.

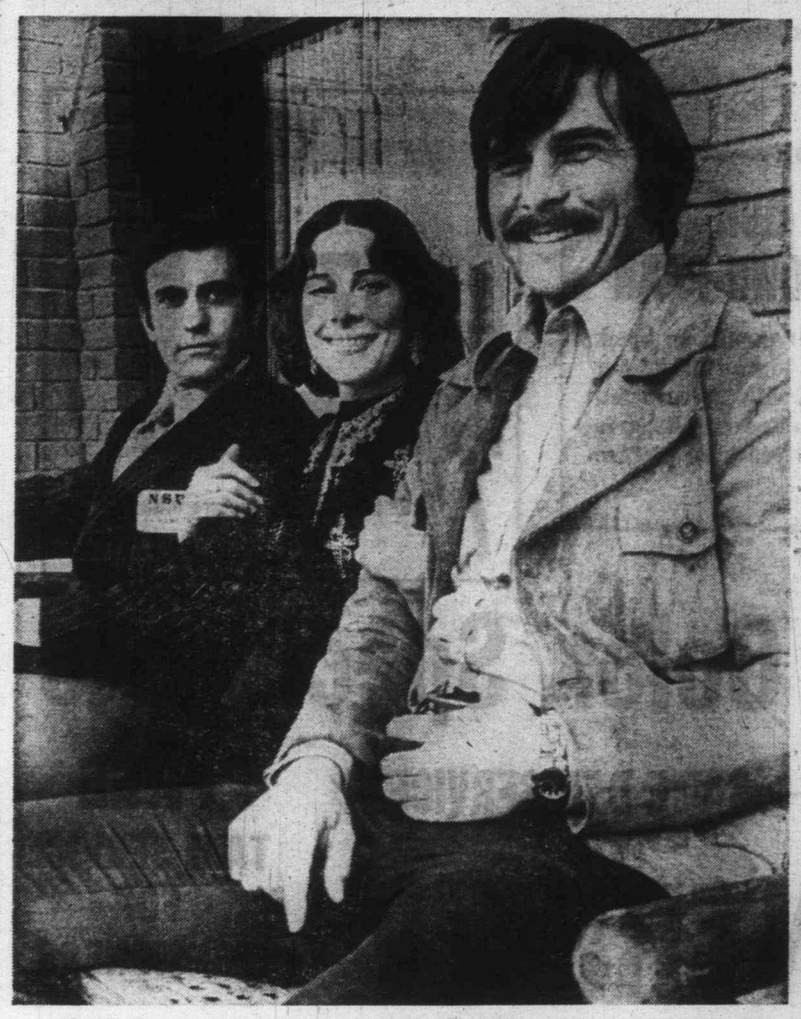
Steinbeck Story

World premiere of a new movie version of John Steinbeck's famous story The Red Pony will be on television — Channel 8 at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara will co-star as the parents. Clint Howard as their son and wonky-eyed Jack Elam as her father. The show already has been nominated for several of TV's annual Emmy awards.



Time of Terror

How time flies — already Hollywood is able to make a movie that can be called Class of '63. It's due on Channel 4 at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday and stars Cliff Gorman, left, and Joan Hackett as husband and wife who return to their old school for a reunion that turns into a time of terror, thanks to Hackett-adoring James Brolin.

Hollywood Marriage Records 40 Years

"I think Pat and Eloise O'Brien have two or three years on us," said Young.

"But I guess I'm as proud of our marriage as I am about anything else in my life."

Inasmuch as Young dispenses prescriptions as Marcus Welby, M.D. each week, he was asked to prescribe the ingredients for a long and lasting marriage.

"My usual answer is to live marriage one day at a time," he said. "But anyone can say that. You know, like climbing a mountain one step at a time.

"Betty says she thinks the essence of a successful marriage is kindness. That one word says a great deal. She also says that we laugh and kiss a lot. I don't know if that's a recipe, but it works for us."

Live Together

Young was under contract to MGM back in 1933 when he and Betty Henderson decided to slip off to Santa Ana, Calif., where the three day waiting period between granting of a license and the ceremony did not apply.

"In those days the studios didn't want its contractees to marry because they thought it would spoil our images or something," Young said.

"It was all right to live together, the studios said, but not to sign any papers. Some people still feel that way I guess. Can't say that I'm one of them.

"Anyhow, we forgot about taking witnesses with us to the justice of the peace. We needed two. One was the wife of the J.P. and the other was just some guy who was hanging around.

"After the ceremony he asked us both a lot of questions. Finally I asked him who he was and he admitted he was a reporter for a Los Angeles newspaper. By the time we drove back to town our marriage was on the front page. But Louis Mayer didn't say a word, and I wasn't fired."

Same Home

The Youngs have lived in the same Beverly Hills home for 30 years, adding, redecorating and remodeling as their family grew to include four daughters: Carol, Barbara, Betty Lou and Kathy. All but Kathy are married. They've produced five grandchildren for the Youngs.

The house itself is almost exactly what everyone might imagine Welby-Young would choose. It sits back off the street behind a manicured lawn with large trees shading its stone and frame construction.

Young paid $27,000 for the place 30 years ago. Today, without exaggeration it is worth 10 times that amount.

"Just lucky, I guess," he said. "The same with my marriage. I must have a guardian angel someplace looking after me.

"Betty is a marvelous woman who always says our marriage, not her marriage. As if the marriage had a separate entity of its own, which I guess it does. It is something we want to protect and preserve.
